SENATE LEADERS MOVE TO INSIST ON PARTIAL DIVERSION OF HIGHWAY DEPARTMENT FUNDS

VANDERBILT TELLS HIS OWN VERSION OF 'HIT-RUN' STORY

Mussolini Did Hit Child and Told Him Not to Look Back, Says Newspaperman.

SUIT THREATENED AGAINST BUTLER

Cornelius Hints He Will Bring Civil Suit If General Does Not "Retract Certain Things."

SAN DIEGO, Cal., Feb. 12.—(UP)—The San Diego Sun said in a copyrighted interview with Cornelius Vanderbilt, Jr., today that the young writer may file a civil suit against General Smedley D. Butler as the result of the Butler-Mussolini incident.

Vanderbilt said he would bring suit unless "certain things are retracted" and "others cleared up," the Sun story said. Vanderbilt has been here incognito for several days.

General Butler's speech before a Philadelphia club in which he said he had learned that Premier Benito Mussolini, of Italy, had run down a child in his automobile and had not halted caused the United States to apologize to Italy. Court-martial proceedings were instituted, but dropped with a reprimand to the general.

"The Butler court-martial may be at an end in Washington," Vanderbilt was quoted as saying, "but as far as I am concerned there are still a lot of other things to be cleared up, including the statement attributed to me by Butler over the so-called Mussolini hit-and-run episode."

Pressed for details as to the cause for a possible civil suit against Butler, Vanderbilt made his first public statement of the incident referred to by Butler in Philadelphia and which brought about the apology by the United States.

"At the original gathering of some 23 of the members of the American affiliated lecture bureau in November, 1930, it was understood and agreed that things said by General Butler, another speaker and myself were not to be repeated outside the four walls of the lecture room," the Sun quoted Vanderbilt.

"General Butler not only violated the confidence of this lecturing group, but repeated inaccurately a statement of mine before the Contemporary Club of Philadelphia in January.

"General Butler credited me with saying that Mussolini killed a child while motoring and that he (Mussolini) drove on with the remark 'what is one life in the affairs of state.'

"I am not trying to dig up the past, but there have been so many garbled accounts concerning this matter that I now feel that in justice to my own work, which has suffered considerably since the incident, the public should know the real truth in that General Butler violated the agreement of our lecture organization.

"The incident which General Butler incorrectly described came about in the following manner:

"I was riding with Mussolini, who was driving his car. At a sharp jog in the road a small child ran in front of the machine and was hit. I looked back to see if the child had been hurt, and as I did so Mussolini placed his hand on my knee and these were his very words: 'Never look back, Mr. Vanderbilt, always look ahead in life.'

"I wonder how General Butler would feel if I were not to respect his confidence and repeat some of the very confidential things he has said in my hearing. My position all during this controversy has been that a gentleman should not violate confidential information, but now that the court-martial has been dismissed I feel the public should know the true state of affairs."

Vanderbilt has been to San Diego several times in the last ten days, flying here from Phoenix.

It was learned that one of his reasons for coming here was for the purpose of gathering data on the Butler-Williams cocktail episode of five years ago.

The case attracted nationwide attention when General Butler preferred charges of intoxication and conduct unbecoming an officer against Colonel Alexander Williams, whom he had relieved as commandant of the United States marine corps base.

Female Fox Terrier Rules Dogdom of U. S.

NEW YORK, Feb. 12.—(AP)—Pendley Calling of Blarney, a wire-haired female fox terrier, tonight was awarded the grand championship of the Westminster Kennels Club's annual dog show.

The title—equivalent to ruler of American dogdom—went for the second successive year to the English-bred animal owned by John G. Bates, of Morristown, N. J.

It took the judges three and one-half hours to decide between Pendley Calling and Blue Ban, an English setter belonging to Dr. A. A. Mitten, of Philadelphia. Blue Ban not only took second honors but also the title of best American-bred dog.

More than 2,500 dogs competed for the grand championship.

FARMERS MAY BUY FOOD WITH RELIEF MONEY, SAYS HYDE

Statement Fails, However, To Stop Criticism of Compromise; Early Senate Vote Expected.

BY FRANCIS M. STEPHENSON.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 12.—(AP)—The administration informed the senate today that the pending $20,000,000 drouth loan fund could be used by the farmer borrowers for the purchase of food and clothing if necessary for agricultural rehabilitation.

With this word from Secretary Hyde the way was opened for adoption of the much disputed compromise and notice was served by Senator McNary, of Oregon, the assistant republican leader, that he would ask the senate to stay in session tomorrow until it had voted.

Senator Borah, of Idaho, a leader of the republican independents, who offered the resolution calling for the interpretation by Secretary Hyde, said the reply of the agriculture chief was "clear enough that there is no prohibition against food."

Nevertheless there was no sign tonight after another democratic outbreak that the opposition of some of the democrats and republican independents to the substitute for the $25,000,000 Red Cross relief appropriation had subsided.

Sent From Louisville.

Hyde's statement was sent to the senate from Louisville. It followed a series of conferences between President Hoover and senate republican leaders.

Hyde reaffirmed the administration's contention that the purpose of the loan fund was not for the purchase of food and supplies for the farmers and that this relief was being left to the Red Cross.

"On the other hand," he continued, "it is my understanding that the major purpose of this additional legislation is in effect to restore the weakened credit situation and that when loans under any part of the amendment are made to those who have the securities indicated for that purpose and for making the next crop and for rehabilitation from the drouth, there could be no prohibition against the proceeds of such loans being used for food or other supplies if they were necessary to effect the purpose."

The reading of the statement was listened to attentively. The senate has stood against the president and the republican house in its contention for federal funds for food purchases.

Sharp Remarks.

There were some sharp remarks immediately following the reading but it stilled the debate for the day. Senator Norris, republican, Nebraska, suggested that the letter resembled the report of the Wickersham commission. Senator Barkley, democrat, Kentucky, proposed that it be referred to the attorney general for an interpretation.

However, Senators Borah and Robinson, and Caraway, of Arkansas, accepted it as sanctioning the use of the loans for the magic word "food."

Senator Watson, of Indiana, the republican leader, said the letter was "very satisfactory" and a "complete refutation of charges so frequently made that the money in this measure could under no circumstances be used for the purchase of food, clothing and medicine."

Senator Davis, republican, Pennsylvania, a former colleague of Hyde in the cabinet, expressed assurance that Hyde would "construe the law sympathetically and for the benefit of those suffering for the necessities of life."

The day of debate preceding the receipt of the Hyde reply by Vice Presi-

Capacity Crowd Hears Noted Theology Students Discuss Beliefs at Religious Forum in Auditorium

DR. SAM SMALL, Presiding. CLARENCE DARROW, Agnostic. QUIN O'BRIEN, Catholic. DR. ASHBY JONES, Protestant. RABBI BRICKNER, Jew.

"Superstition" Target Of Darrow's Blast In Religious Debate

BY LEWIS HAWKINS.

Clarence Darrow, for half a century champion of the underdog and knight errant in the cause of justice as he sees it, was in the lists again Thursday night.

This time the gaunt veteran of ten thousand frays directed his caustic shafts at what had been labeled "religion." What really felt the brunt of his scathing polemics was just his lifelong enemy injustice, and its breeders, ignorance and superstition.

For this whimsical old war horse, proclaiming agnosticism and presumably arguing his profession of this neutral disbelief, never could have been contented with enunciating the simple "I don't know." Not in this fashion could he deal those resounding blows at his pet aversions.

Biting Wit, Sly Allusion.

So when Darrow stepped to the rostrum to give the first of the evening's addresses (by the luck of the draw his negation was forced ahead of the others' affirmations) the jovial Darrow was left behind. Instead there flamed that zeal to destroy those things which, to him, have spelled misery for humankind and have hindered rather than helped man through the ages.

With biting wit, sly allusion and smashing periods the old warrior warmed up as he smelled the smoke always stirred by the old battle.

Deliberately he passed up any rationalized belief such as was to be presented by his opponents later. Instead he turned to the old hell-fire-and-damnation brand that he sees as having risen from the cesspool of superstition to weld mighty shackles of superstition on the imaginations of unthinking masses and thus hinder these masses on their way to a fuller, happier life. Scorn them as he may,

Religious Forum Is Marked By Fine Spirit of Tolerance

An audience which filled Atlanta's auditorium last night sat in tense attention for nearly three hours while a Catholic, a Protestant and a Jew gave the reasons for their religious beliefs, and an agnostic revealed the basis of his disbelief. There was no break in this attention save for the spontaneous outbursts of applause which were given impartially to each of the speakers. It was an audience and an occasion which gave a fine demonstration of that religious tolerance which ran like a connecting and unifying thread through the addresses of all, not omitting even that of the agnostic.

Dr. Sam Small acted as chairman and introduced as the first speaker Clarence Darrow, famous lawyer and rationalist. Quin O'Brien, noted Chicago lawyer and chautauqua lecturer, was the second speaker and upheld the tenets of the Catholic church. Dr. M. Ashby Jones, formerly pastor of the Ponce de Leon Baptist church, spoke third, on "Why I Am a Protestant." Rabbi Barnett R. Brickner, of Cleveland, brought the program to an end with his address on "Why I Am a Jew," an eloquent appeal which proved a fitting climax for the evening.

In view of the intense interest shown in this religious symposium, four members of The Constitution staff were assigned to "cover" the story. Lewis Hawkins writes of the address of Mr. Darrow, R. E. Powell of Mr. O'Brien, Ben Cooper of Dr. Jones, and Ernest Rubin of Rabbi Brickner.

"All Truth Divine," Asserts Dr. Jones, For Protestantism

BY BEN COOPER.

"This universe plays the game by rules, and if there be rules, someone made them," declared the Rev. M. Ashby Jones, pastor of the Second Baptist church of St. Louis, and former pastor of the Ponce de Leon Baptist church of Atlanta.

"Faith is not a substitute for knowledge," Dr. Jones said. "Faith must grow out of knowledge, and the quality of faith is determined by the quality of knowledge. The group for which I speak believes that all truth, no matter what may be its form of expression, is divine truth, and that each man may receive that truth for himself and interpret it for himself."

"It was a great audience, as fair as ever I have seen," Dr. Jones said. "There was less suggestion of partizanship, and a more general desire to give a fair hearing. On the whole, it counts for better religious feeling among the denominations."

Dislikes Term "Protestant."

After acknowledging the introduction by Dr. Sam W. Small, Dr. Jones expressed dislike for the term "Protestant." "Historically it is the name, but I have no protest against the great Catholic church. . . . God speed

Eloquent Appeal For Tolerance Made By Rabbi Brickner

BY ERNEST RUBIN.

Reminding his audience that in the melee of differences in religious belief and non-belief expounded by the three speakers who preceded him, they do not forget the purpose for which the symposium was held—goodwill based upon better understanding one of thte other, Rabbi Brickner directed his talk to a conclusion in which he asked the Christian world to display just one sign of the much-sought goodwill and brotherhood of man.

"You talk goodwill, you talk better understanding; you are Christians supposed to turn the other cheek. I ask only that from now on there cease to be taught from the every Christian pulpit the historic lie that the Jews crucified Jesus."

The noted Cleveland rabbi began his share of the symposium on "Why I Am a Jew" in a far lighter manner. He carried it through with a characteristic display of gentleness and affableness, but at the end exhibited a seriousness in the desire that some practical good come of the plea for tolerance which formed the keynote of the symposium.

Dr. Brickner was the last speaker of the evening, as decided by drawing

"Emphasize Things On Which We Agree," Urges Quin O'Brien

BY R. E. POWELL.

An earnest defense of the doctrines of his church and an evangelistic defense of the Bible, both interlaced with the suave appeal of the experienced advocate, stood out in the 30 minutes used by Quin O'Brien, noted Chicago lawyer, in presenting the Catholic side of religion in the auditorium symposium.

First of three to follow Darrow, he set the pace for the friendly thrusts at the veteran agnostic and championed his own faith with no disparagement to others save to offer a regret that "the Protestant church, split between modernism and fundamentalism, has tossed away the doctrines of Christianity which he said had been borrowed from the Catholics."

Among the virtues of the Catholic denomination, O'Brien cited its share in the birth of the Magna Charta, the discovery of America and the first declaration of religious freedom in America after it had been discovered. His peroration was an appeal to all religions to "emphasize the things on which we agree, forget those on which we differ, and stand for God, religion and democracy."

It was Mr. O'Brien's sixteenth forum, he said when the symposium had ended, and in none has he received "a finer or more tolerant response from an audience.

Calls Reception Magnificent.

"Why," he said, "a man from Mars, or even from India, couldn't have told from the reaction of that audience what it most believed about religion. The Atlanta reception was magnificent but by no means a surprise to me."

Mr. Darrow had opened what Mr. O'Brien subsequently called a disarm-

PITTMAN JURORS UNABLE TO AGREE

A jury in Judge Virlyn B. Moore's division of the Fulton superior court Thursday night appeared deadlocked on a verdict in the case of S. A. Pittman, rent collector, accused of murder in connection with the slaying on January 10, of E. B. Fowler, World War veteran. After deliberating almost seven hours the jurors were unable to agree on a verdict and were sent to a hotel by Judge Moore with instructions to return to the courthouse and resume their discussion at 9 o'clock this morning. The case went to the jury at 3 o'clock Thursday afternoon after a three-day trial which opened Tuesday.

In argument to the jury, in a packed courtroom, Assistant Solicitor-General John H. Hudson charged Pittman with "cold-blooded, deliberate murder," and asked for a verdict of

Growing Federal Power Threatens True Liberty, Says President Hoover

WASHINGTON, Feb. 12.—(AP)—President Hoover declared in a Lincoln Day address tonight that the dominant problem in the American form of government today revolves about the relationship of federal, state and local governments.

Speaking over the radio from the White House study, fraught with memories of the Civil War president because it was there he worked, President Hoover warned that increased federal powers "can lead but to the superstate where every man becomes the servant of the state and real liberty is lost."

Such a state, he said, was not the kind of government Abraham Lincoln sought to build.

"There is an entirely different avenue by which we may both resist this drift to centralized government and at the same time meet a multitude of problems," he said. "That is to strengthen in the nation a sense and an organization of self-help and co-operation to solve as many problems as possible outside of government."

The situation arising out of the present economic depression was viewed by the president as a test of the American people's ability to solve great problems outside of government action.

Test of Moral Strength.

"The degree of moral strength with which we emerge from this period," he said, "will be determined by whether individuals and local communities continue to meet their responsibilities.

"The country can take courage and pride in the manner in which organizations for relief and for the provision of employment have sprung up over the nation," he said, adding:

"Never before in a great depression has there been so systematic a protection against distress; never before has there been so little social disorder; never before has there been such an outpouring of the spirit of self-sacrifice and of service."

President Hoover said the "invisible presence of Lincoln dominated the walls of the room from which he spoke."

"From the windows of the study,"

MEMPHIS PAPERS END LEA CONTROL

MEMPHIS, Tenn., Feb. 12.—(AP)—The Commercial Appeal and the Evening Appeal, daily newspapers formerly controlled by Colonel Luke Lea, of Nashville, were turned over to a new board of directors today and their receivership was removed by Chancellor M. C. Ketchum. The receivership began December 12.

After two postponements and a long hearing today, Chancellor Ketchum approved a financing plan backed by the Minnesota and Ontario Paper Company, the papers' largest creditor. He rejected a tentative proposal offered for Colonel Lea to re-finance the Memphis Commercial Appeal, Inc., which operates the papers.

The board authorized to operate

State Asked To Join Yorktown Ceremony

Creation of a Yorktown celebration commission, to be composed of members of the general assembly and with Governor Hardman and Governor-elect Russell as ex-officio members, was urged before a joint meeting of the legislature Thursday at noon by Dr. W. A. R. Goodman, president of the Yorktown sesquicentennial commission.

Dr. Goodman, who came to Georgia first in a tour of inviting the thirteen original colonies to be represented at the sesquicentennial next October 19, when President Hoover will speak, appeared before the assembly as the personal representative of Governor John Garland Pollard.

Georgia was asked at least to send its flag and a color guard and the hope was ventured that the state would be able to send its complete military strength to take part in the parade. The library committee of the house of representatives, in Washington, Thursday approved the Bland bill to authorize an additional $50,000 for the federal government's participation in the celebration.

COMMITTEE VOTES COMPROMISE PLAN ON VETERAN BONUS

Loan Value of Service Certificates Would Be Increased 50 Per Cent by Proposal.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 12.—(AP)—A compromise proposal to increase loans on veterans' service certificates from 22 1-2 to 50 per cent with interest charges reduced to 4 1-2 per cent was unanimously agreed upon today by the house ways and means committee.

The proposal is expected to involve an outlay of $700,000,000 if 60 per cent of the veterans apply for funds it would make available. Should the 3,500,000 veterans seek loans, the measure would call for $1,700,000,000.

Speaker Longworth and other house republican leaders indicated that the measure would be brought up for consideration Monday under rules that would insure its passage without amendment.

Under the plan, which was introduced late today by Chairman Hawley, of the committee, the funds could be drawn from the $772,000,000 sinking fund on the certificates maturing in 1945 and from the $50,000,000 remaining of the $312,000,000 life insurance fund.

The measure does not limit the loans to those in need. It merely broadens the existing adjusted compensation loan act provisions, making it possible for veterans already having loans to more than double the amount at reduced interest rates.

Chairman Hawley said it would require about six months for the veterans' administration to put the plan into full operation.

The agreement was reached after an all-day session behind closed doors. Previously the committee voted down proposals to pay the face and cash values of the certificates, and a proposal also offered by Hawley to increase loans 40 per cent and restrict them to the needy.

The committee expects to formally report the bill to the house tomorrow.

Speaker Longworth approved the compromise.

"I consider it a very fortunate settlement," he said. "I do not believe it will involve great difficulty in financing. It will provide greatly needed assistance to the veterans."

Hawley said the committee left the method of financing the loans to the treasury, but Minority Leader Garner said it would not necessitate any bond issue. He said should the sinking fund be exhausted, additional loans could be financed through short-term treasury certificates at low rates of interest. Garner offered the 50 per cent plan, which was adopted.

Representative Bacharach, republican, New Jersey, who initiated the loan plan modified today said it "positively would not require a bond issue."

The treasury has opposed relief measures which would require a bond issue of sizeable proportion.

In a statement tonight on the measure, Veterans Administrator Hines said the gross borrowing power for all certificates now in force would be $1,711,500,000.

"Bearing in mind the fact that approximately $325,000,000 has to date been loaned on the certificates," Hines added, "the net additional potential amount it will be possible for veterans to borrow will approximate $1,386,500,000.

"How much of this amount will actually be borrowed will depend upon the extent to which veterans will avail themselves of the extended loan privileges.

LONGER SESSION INDICATED AS NEW PLAN IS REVEALED

Hypothecation of Half of W. & A. Rentals Is Seen as Desire of the Upper House Members.

SHORT MEETINGS EXPECTED TODAY

Claude G. Bowers Is Invited To Address Joint Meeting of Houses February 20.

BY R. E. POWELL.

Senate agreement to a five-year discount of Western & Atlantic railroad rentals by sale to banks provided the house will agree to a hypothecation of an additional five years of warrants to the state highway commission was admitted Thursday night by members of the senate finance committee to be the compromise plan around which the last half of the general assembly's struggle to meet a state deficit will revolve.

This movement, it was pointed out, will considerably lengthen the already long extra session of the legislature, as it has been shown in previous tests that the house is overwhelmingly opposed to any diversion of state highway department funds, and doubtless will continue such opposition.

A substitute bill, it was learned from authoritive sources Thursday night, has been drawn and agreed to by several members of the upper house. It will be offered as a substitute to the Battle-Allen bill, calling for mandatory ten-year discount to the banks for a yield not less than $3,200,000 when the senate takes up the bill the house voted 146 to 50 for Wednesday and sent by special messenger to the senate Thursday morning.

Admittedly a conciliatory gesture, half straight discount and half indirect diversion of highway funds is conceded very little chance of passage in the senate. If it should pass as a substitute to the Battle-Allen bill, the fight will then switch to a conference committee to be named by President Neill for the senate and Speaker Russell for the house.

The senate, in passing the Lane bill to place all tax moneys into the general treasury, indicated its early preference for a diversion of the highway money as the easiest method of paying off the state's $6,200,000 debt. This measure was killed by an overwhelming house committee vote and a further indication of the house opposition to diversion came Wednesday when the diversion substitute to the rental discount bill mustered only 21 votes.

Both houses of the general assembly Thursday virtually marked time with the house focusing its attention on revenue raising measures to be considered next week.

While the lower branch spent the morning hour discussing a bill to authorize the purchase of a state farm,

Site of Nancy Hart's Heroic Deed To Be Developed Into Forest Park

BY BEN F. MEYER.

ELBERTON, Ga., Feb. 12.—(AP)—Plans for development of a forest park in the vicinity where Nancy Hart, Revolutionary War heroine, captured six tories, were announced here today.

Miss Mary L. Wright, regent of the Stephen Heard chapter of the Daughters of the American Revolution here, said today a tract of five acres would be offered to the state D. A. R. organization at its annual convention in March.

The land, on the head waters of War-Hatch creek, where Nancy Hart is said to have effected the capture of the hungry enemies, is owned at present by the local chapter and by the Nancy Hart chapter of the D. A. R. at Milledgeville.

Miss Wright said it was planned to make the land a historic park site.

Mrs. Hart won a place in history by her capture of the tories. The tories were anxious, history says, to hang all whigs. Mrs. Hart's husband and a number of other men were hiding in a swamp and the tories came for them. But before they decided to beat the bush they dropped in to visit Mrs. Hart, known for her culinary ability, to demand a meal.

Mrs. Hart prepared it for them. Histories say the table was loaded with "smoking venison, hoe cake and comb honey." The tories stacked arms and sat down to eat. But they did not reckon with the nerve of Nancy

Today, Friday, 13th, Anniversary Of Coldest Day in Georgia History

BY WILLIAM O. KEY, JR.

To the older residents of Atlanta today is something more than merely Friday the thirteenth.

It is the thirty-second anniversary of the coldest day for the city on record—when the weather bureau thermometers recorded 8 1-2 degrees below zero.

At 8 o'clock on the morning of February 13, 1899, Atlantans found the city paralyzed by an icy blast that already had reached proportions of a blizzard. At that hour the lowest mark was reached on thermometers.

Suffering was widespread, for the blizzard had descended on Atlanta with a suddenness that found hundreds of families unprepared and in dire want. Real cold weather gripped the city on the morning of February 12, and grew more bitter, hour by hour.

That February 13th 32 years ago did not happen also to be a Friday, but it loomed ominously for a large part of the stricken city. So abrupt was the descent of the bitter weather that the city was faced with the duty of relieving widespread suffering. And it was The Atlanta Constitution which launched the movement for contributions to allay the plight of hundreds of unfortunates.

As a result of The Constitution's public appeal thousands of dollars in cash, provisions, fuel and clothing

J. P. Allen & Co. To Furnish Costumes for Extravaganza

Selection of J. P. Allen & Company, one of the outstanding women's stores in the south, to furnish the costumes for the Greater Atlanta Fashion and Beauty Extravaganza, was announced Thursday by Mrs. Bernard Neal, general chairman of the event.

The extravaganza will be staged at the Paramount theater the week of February 23 for the benefit of Tallulah Falls school, with a large number of Atlanta's sub-debs, debutantes and young matrons participating.

Sponsoring the fashion and beauty extravaganza is the Young Matrons' Circle of Tallulah Falls school, and co-operating with the organization in staging the event are The Atlanta Constitution, Paramount theater, the Ronald B. Woodyard System of New York, and a number of the leading merchants and business establishments of Atlanta.

An outstanding feature of the event will be the selection of Atlanta's fashion queen, to be chosen by representatives of the various civic clubs and societies of the city who attend the production as the guests of the theater and cast their ballots throughout the week.

The selection will be based on grace, natural charm, poise, carriage, and ability of the young women to model clothes. Beauty will be a secondary consideration. Eighteen performances will be held throughout the week and to the one receiving the most ballots for the entire event will go the honor of becoming Atlanta's first fashion queen.

With many song and dance numbers interposed, the extravaganza will take the form of a miniature musical revue. A special stage setting is being erected and a runway will be extended out over the audience so that the beautiful gowns and other costumes may be seen to the best advantage. Dance numbers will be furnished by the Semon-White studio.

Under the arrangement made with J. P. Allen & Company, this popular woman's establishment will supply all of the dresses, hats, shoes, hose, gloves, bags and other accessories to be used in the production.

Mrs. Neal announces that a booth will be established on the mezzanine floor of Allen's store and that members of the Young Matrons' Circle will be on duty there at all hours of the day to sell tickets for the extravaganza.

Rehearsals are being held daily at the Piedmont Driving Club under the direction of Mr. Woodyard. Those who will take part will be chosen from the following: Miss Jane Dillon, Miss Helen Parker, Mrs. J. K. Ottley, Jr., Mrs. F. M. Atkins, Mrs. Henry Hirsch, Miss Katherine Harris, Mrs. Ralph Bullard, Mrs. Ralph Paris, Miss Phebe Rhett, Miss Rose Mary Townley, Miss Lucia Smith, Miss Charlotte Adams, Miss Dean Smith, Miss Octavia Riley, Mrs. William Ogden, Mrs. Preston Arkwright, Jr., Miss Margaret McCarty, Miss Marion Smith, Miss Eugenia Bridges, Miss Boyce Lokey, Miss Sarah Law, Miss Mary Bryan, Miss Elsie Prater, Miss Frances North, Miss Helena Callaway, Miss Hannah Sterne, Miss Laura Troutman, Miss Frances Clarke, Miss Julia Meador, Miss Marion Hull Smith, Miss Ruth Rowbotham, Miss Peggy Poindexter, Miss Frances Spalding, Miss Yolande Gwinn, Miss Elizabeth Branch, Miss Aline Timmons, Miss Babara Prater, Miss Etheline Johnson, Miss Joan Clarke, Miss Jule McClatchey, Miss Eleanor Johnson, Miss Constance Adams, and Miss Jaqueline Moore.

ATLANTA GAS LIGHT COMPANY

CENTRAL GASCO SYSTEM

ATLANTA SELECTED FOR OAKLAND PLANT

Atlanta has been selected by the Oakland Motor Car Company as one of five cities in the United States where supply depots and warehouses will be established in the immediate future, it was announced by W. A. Blees, vice president of the company, who was here Thursday conducting a conference of Oakland-Pontiac dealers in the southeast.

Opening of the new plants is provided for in the company's national expansion program, in which the expenditure of $720,000 annually is contemplated. The other cities where plants will be located are Boston, Philadelphia, Kansas City, Minneapolis and another southern city yet to be selected.

The company will lease a site, Mr. Blees said, and it is expected that some action will be taken within the next few weeks. As to size, Mr. Blees said that the warehouse must provide approximately 15,000 square feet of floor space. He valued the parts that would be carried at $75,000, sufficient to supply the entire southeast. The plant would have a pay roll of about $60,000 annually, he said.

During the dealer conference plans were made for an elaborate scheme of promotion for the coming year. A business session was held during the afternoon and the dealers were guests of the company at a banquet and entertainment during the evening.

FRIDAY, THIRTEEN, COLD 31 YEARS AGO

were concentrated at police headquarters on the morning of the thirteenth, and meantime a relief committee had been appointed. It was headed by W. O. Jones, as chairman; and it included such figures in the city's life as H. M. Patterson, Eugene R. Black, Harry Schlesinger, and Morris Brandon.

All during the day cartloads of coal and wood, clothing and blankets, food and medicines were driven about the city. Mr. Schlesinger personally stood on the back steps of the horse-drawn police patrol wagon and, heralded by a banner which bore the words, "Help the Poor," visited merchants and grocers, who piled the wagon high with necessities.

Consulting the files of The Constitution one finds, incidentally, that it was on that cold day back in February, 1899, that Frank L Stanton, then conducting his famous column, "Just From Georgia," wrote "The Georgia Snow Song." A couple of its stanzas are as follows:

"Ef dis heah is de sunny south,
I dunno whar to go!
De good Lawd knows
I froze—I froze!
Dey waller me in snow!

O believers!
Dis heah ain't de way;
De good Lawd knows
I des 'bout froze,
But you'll git warm some day!

But today, being Friday the thirteenth, a lot of people will have their mind warily upon other things, because it is popularly considered a hoodoo day and a sort of jinx-and-double-jinx affair. For centuries Friday and the mystic numerical "13" have borne evil reputations, the former because of its association with the Crucifixion. But facts belie this reputation, because:

In the last 13 years the unluckiest day of the week has joined with the most ill-favored date of the month to produce 22 Friday the thirteenths. And on none of those 22 days has there been a disaster of major proportion.

It is true that Captain Emilio Carranza was killed on Friday the thirteenth, but the Bremen flew across the Atlantic. A bank was swindled, news columns disclose, but a poor man inherited a fortune and stocks soared. Gene Tunney won a fight and a tree struck by lighting yielded baked apples!

And the numerical "13" itself figures felicitously in American history. The 13 colonies chose a flag with 13 stars and 13 stripes; the national anthem was born on the 13th. American troops took St. Mihiel on the 13th, and the motto, "E Pluribus Unum" contains 13 letters.

WATER DISCOUNT ACTION DEFERRED

Council's finance committee Thursday afternoon sidestepped at least for the time being efforts of Councilman John A. White, of the fourth ward, to repeal an ordinance discontinuing discounts on water bills.

Holding that such a procedure would necessitate redrafting of the January finance sheet inasmuch as $500,000 was anticipated from collection of gross amounts of water bills, members of the committee voted to defer any action pending return o Atlanta of Mayor James L. Key.

The mayor is on a vacation trip to Cuba, but is expected back about the middle of next week. The matter will be brought to the committee at a special meeting February 23.

CAST FOR 'CONTAGION' NAMED BY ATCHISON

Director Praises Work of Players in Drama Workshop Offering.

"Contagion," a comedy in three acts, by Jean Thornwell Alexander, which will be presented by the Drama Workshop at the Atlanta Woman's Club, on Tuesday night, is exceptionally well cast.

BEN ATCHISON.

"The characters are interesting as types and will be clearly depicted," Director Ben Atchison said Thursday. "Miss Julie, an appealing and attractive woman of about 30, is still in love with Dr. Persons, although her engagement to him has been broken for years. Leone Robertson Foote plays the part of Julie. Mrs. Foote is an experienced actress and is particularly suited to the role. George Bush, who plays the male lead is well known to Atlanta Little theater audiences. Mr. Bush gives an unusually good interpretation of the serious minded Dr. Persons, who by his very gaiety becomes comic.

"The other characters in the play are a burglar, an old maid and Miss Julie's maid. Walter Foote is playing the part of the burglar, who successfully poses as an artist. Mr. Foote will be remembered as Jerry, in 'At the Fair,' a play in one act by Frances Freeborn Pauley, which was presented by the Drama Workshop in September. Banty, who finally makes the burglar see the error of his ways and marries him, is played by Winfred Orr. Miss Orr played with the Blackfriars at the University of Georgia for several years. Nancy Wilson, who will be remembered as Aunt Zenie in 'Lighted Candles,' by Margaret Bland Sewell, convincingly portrays Miss Naria, a prying and unpleasant old maid."

Mary Martin Ramage is assisting Mr. Atchison in directing the play.

Motorized Alms Seeker Draws 90-Day Jail Term

Such a knight of the road was William Burkholder, police said. He called on the housewives along his route in a motor car.

A judge sent him to jail for 90 days.

PIKE IS AWARDED $75,000 BY JURY

Last of Parcels in Site for New Postoffice Condemned.

A price of $75,000 on the 51 by 100 foot lot of Frank T. Pike at Spring street and Hunter street was set Thursday by a jury in federal court after a hearing on condemnation proceedings brought by the government to acquire the property for use as a part of the new postoffice site.

The government had made an offer of $70,000 to Pike, but the owner claimed the property was worth $153,000. In the hearing before Judge W. H. Barrett, of Augusta, valuations were given by appraisers who placed the value at from $60,000 to $175,000.

Paul S. Etheridge, attorney for Pike, said a motion for a new trial has been prepared and will be filed. Etheridge said the case "will be carried to the supreme court of the United States if necessary."

Such a step, however, it was pointed out by federal authorities, would not affect progress of the work. Hal Lindsay, assistant United States district attorney, in the absence of Clint W. Hager, who is ill of influenza, was authority for this statement. Mr. Lindsay said that regardless of an appeal to the United States supreme court, the work would go ahead on the new structure whenever the order was received from Washington.

Other parcels of the postoffice site property have been acquired by the government through friendly condemnation suits, the Pike property being the only contested parcel involved in the tract.

WORK OF WOMEN AT NIGHT TO STOP

WASHINGTON, Feb. 12.—(AP)—President Hoover was informed today that elimination of night work for women and children in cotton mills has become a virtual certainty.

George A. Sloan, head of the Cotton Textile Institute of New York, told the president that operators representing 70 per cent of the mills utilizing such night labor had indorsed the policy and agreed to put it into effect on March 1 provided an additional 5 per cent of the industry came under the scope of the plan.

The institute, Sloan said, "hoped and believed" that the gaining of the additional assent was certain. He added President Hoover offered sympathetic support for the movement.

Secretary Lamont accompanied Sloan to the White House, and the policy for the elimination of the night work has been given the aid of the government's trade assisting forces ever since its suggestion. The president was also told that general conditions in cotton manufacture had been much improved, and that sales of cotton yarn and cloth for the first six weeks of 1931 had been 20 per cent in excess of production.

In a statement issued after the conference, Sloan said that the dropping of night work for women and children would not "entail serious dislocation of labor," since preparations had been made for it.

Georgia Levy on Chain Stores Is Voided by Supreme Court

The state supreme court Thursday held unconstitutional Georgia's tax on chain stores and in another case ruled that a man who overdraws his bank account is in the same status as a man who issues a bad check and is subject to prosecution.

The tax decision voids the chain store tax act passed by the 1929 legislature and comptroller general's office records show that the state will lose approximately $60,000 yearly in fees.

The decision was rendered in injunction proceedings brought against Comptroller General William B. Harrison by the F. W. Woolworth Company and others. The case was dismissed in Fulton superior court on a demurrer filed by the state and the petitioners then took it to the higher court, alleging unconstitutionality and discrimination. These contentions were upheld.

The 1929 act fixed a tax of $50 per store for chains of five or more stores. The court several weeks ago ruled that the tax did not apply to chains of five stores only.

The bank account decision grew out of the indictment in Douglas county of J. T. Duncan, former president of the Douglasville Banking Company, who was charged with overdrawing his account $263.61 without knowledge or consent of directors of the bank.

Duncan's demurrer to the indictment was overruled and the case carried to the court of appeals, which in turn submitted it to the supreme court because a constitutional question whether a man can be imprisoned for debt was involved. Attorneys for Duncan contended he had merely created a debt to the bank.

The supreme court ruled that while no fraud was alleged it was indicated, and quoted an old decision to the effect that "if a stranger takes a horse out of one's stable, saddled and bridled, there is reason to suspect that he plans to ride the horse away."

Huey P. Long Credits 'Pot-Likker' With Selling Louisiana Bonds

NEW ORLEANS, Feb. 12.—(AP)—Arriving here today to participate in the carnival, Governor Huey P. Long credited "pot-likker," his favorite food, with the highly satisfactory sale of $15,000,000 four and a half per cent state highway bonds at Baton Rouge.

The state received par, $16,500 premium, and $105,000 accrued interest for the issue, bid in by a syndicate of New Orleans and Shreveport bankers headed by Rudolph S. Hecht, president of the Hibernia Bank and Trust Company.

Governor Long, interviewed in high humor this morning, said he invited Mr. Hecht to supper at the executive mansion the night before the bond sale and served him a bowl of pot-likker and corn bread.

"He liked it," said the governor. "He ate heartily. It is a wonderful food.

"Next morning, to my surprise, Mr. Hecht was up before day, telephoning his associates, revising the syndicate offer. When the bids were opened, the syndicate, represented by Mr. Hecht, had outbid the next nearest competitor by $600,000."

Chuckling, the governor added:

"I am confident this bowl of pot-likker did the work and made the state over a half million."

For the benefit of the uninitiated, it might be explained that pot-likker is a boiled mixture of greens and fat pork, the essence of which is poured off and "dunked" with corn bread.

The bankers paid cash for the bonds, which were brought to New Orleans on a train late yesterday by Mr. Hecht, heavily guarded by a detachment of state highway police.

Editor's Note—The statement in the foregoing dispatch to the effect that pot-likker is an essence in which corn-pone is "dunked" was questioned. In reply, a New Orleans authority stated that Georgia and Alabama crumbled the corn-pone into the pot-likker, but that Governor Long "dunks" his. As a matter of fact, corn-pone, so-called, that can be "dunked" is not genuine corn-pone, despite the asseverations of Governor Long to the contrary.

WILBUR ATTACKS KELLEY CHARGES

Cabinet Member Brands Statements as "Flat Falsehoods."

WASHINGTON, Feb. 12.—(AP)—The charge that pressure from large oil companies influenced him in awarding patent to Colorado oil shale lands was described today by Secretary Wilbur as a "flat falsehood."

That was the cabinet member's reply, made today before the senate public lands committee, to charges by Ralph S. Kelley, former field agent of the interior department's general land office.

Kelley, sitting across a narrow table from the interior secretary, listened in silence as Wilbur accused him of having "sold out" to a newspaper "statements he should have made to the department."

"In passing upon oil shale patent applications" said Secretary Wilbur, "I can assure you there has been no ulterior motive.

"My action was not in any single case influenced by any personal, political, financial or other interest or pressure. The decisions of the general land office, the department and myself personally have been based on merits as disclosed by the record.

"My office is and always has been open to any man who has business there including Kelley who has never entered it nor asked to. He first saw me, so far as I know, at the house oil shale hearings two weeks ago. Kelley has avoided exercising the right of coming to me.

"The statement that I have been subjected to any pressure or yielded to it is a flat falsehood."

The secretary assured the committee that "despite Kelley's nonsense the oil and gas reserves of this nation will continue to be conserved by this department as long as I am secretary but with regard for all equities and with respect for statutory requirements."

Wilbur added that while Kelley was with the land office in Denver he had written to the department letters that were "vague, egotistic and full of charges containing hyperbole" but that the department had made every effort to discover whether any basis existed for his criticisms.

"In order to make sure," the secretary said, "I had him come to Washington to take charge of the oil shale activities of the land office." He added Kelley "disappeared" after serving in that capacity from last October 5 to October 31.

The next he heard of Kelley, the secretary said, a newspaperman informed him he had resigned and had made numerous charges against the interior department.

'GOLD BRICK' LOOT OF MAIL ROBBERS

WASHINGTON, Feb. 12.—(AP)—Thugs bludgeoned an armed mail clerk into unconsciousness here early today and escaped with three registered mail pouches, later found to contain exactly 216 pounds of mutilated and worthless currency.

The mail bags were en route from the Federal Reserve bank in New York to the treasury when the hold-up was staged shortly after 2 a. m. in the broad Union station concourse.

It was only after a minute check that treasury officials announced the loot was a "gold brick." It would have been worth $807,000 had the currency been whole, but following the usual custom the bills had been cut in half, and the portions shipped separately.

The treasury tonight had half the bills, and the thieves had the portions that matched them.

Postal officials, secret service operatives and capital police joined in a city-wide search during the day, but tonight the three or more men they sought had not been captured. Only a meagre description of the men was obtained.

Peter Johnson, of Belleville, N. J., a railway mail clerk, was in charge of the shipment at the time of the hold-up. He had helped unload the 28 pouches consigned to the treasury on a lower level of the station and was convoying them to the post office.

"I was walking along behind the mail truck," Johnson said. "I couldn't see in front. The pouches were piled higher than my head. My overcoat was open and my gun strapped inside.

"Out of the corner of my eye I saw two men walking toward an opening in the railway station fence. They didn't seem to hurry. They just sauntered along. I thought they were mail clerks going to work.

"All of a sudden they turned and rushed me. They were about 10 feet away and came running, swinging what looked like lead pipes. I was too surprised to pull my gun. They struck me again and again. I backed away, yelled for help, and threw up my arms to protect my head. One of them hit me on the back of the head. Another blow hit my shoulder. That was the last I knew."

Attracted by the commotion those who reached the spot first found Johnson unconscious, face downward on the cement floor. Physicians found few bruises on him, however, and police and postal inspectors questioned him at length. However, it was argued he was not implicated because an experienced mail clerk would have known good currency would not have been shipped as were the torn bills. He had been in the service for nine years.

Investigators tonight leaned to the theory that four men were involved. They found three sections of lead pipe wrapped in newspaper near the scene. It was learned also the escape had been made in a black touring car kept waiting in the station plaza.

A negro who had been pulling the mail truck told inspectors a man had come rushing at him from another direction brandishing what looked like a gun. He had run, he said, but later saw men carrying mail sacks in their arms toward the door. Since each sack weighed 72 pounds it was held three men participated, while a fourth waited in the car.

Immediately after the robbery the news was broadcast to motorized police patrols throughout the city and a hunt for the black car begun. One man was arrested before daylight but was released after Johnson failed to identify him.

New Orleans Turns to Mardi Gras And Carnival Spirit Holds Sway

NEW ORLEANS, Feb. 12.—(AP)—Overlords of Mardi Gras tonight issued the annual edict for a week's banishment of gloom as Momus, son of Night and God of Joy and Mirth, led his masked hosts through the streets in the first glittering pageant of the New Orleans carnival.

Proving again that the tired businessmen never get too tired to play, nor too grown up to have a fling at make-believe Momus, parade inaugurated the traditional days of the pre-Lenten gaiety that have been observed here since early in the last century.

Through miles of bunting-draped and light festooned streets, crowded to the curbs with thousands of onlookers Momus rode at the head of 17 gorgeous floats themed "Broadcasting Old Favorites." Artisans who began creations of the pageant nearly a year ago, delved into the song books of another day to find the motifs for the floats.

The riding maskers, impersonating the characters of "Old Black Joe," the "Sweetest Story Ever Told," "The Flowers That Bloom in the Spring," "Wearing of the Green," "Juanita" and a dozen other since-favorite tunes, flung favors to the pressing throngs along the route.

The march ended at the municipal auditorium where the annual Momus ball was held before a dazzling and bejewelled court of society folk.

This afternoon sailors and marines from the U. S. S. Wyoming, official visitor in port, were reviewed in a street parade by assistant secretary of the navy, Ernest Lee Jahncke, Governor Huey P. Long, Rear Admiral Christy, Rear Admiral Magruder, Mayor T. S. Walmsley and others.

The governor and his staff were entertained at luncheon on board the Wyoming by Commodore Jahncke at noon and later in the day the assistant secretary of the navy presented the city with the salute gun from the old battle cruiser New Orleans.

NYE MAY DEMAND CANNON TESTIFY

Decision Awaits Detailed Examination Records Given by Bankers.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 12.—(AP)—Bishop James Cannon, Jr., may be called before the senate campaign funds committee before its investigation of the churchman's handling of funds in the 1928 anti-Smith campaign is completed.

This was indicated today by Chairman Nye who said definite decision would await an examination of the mass of data received yesterday from banking officials.

No further hearings are planned until this examination is finished. The investigation started yesterday after Representative Tinkham, republican, Massachusetts, had charged the bishop with violating the federal corrupt practices act in handling campaign funds.

Bishop Cannon was chairman of the Virginia anti-Smith committee in the 1928 presidential election. He has been questioned about his activities by the senate lobby committee but he successfully challenged its authority for such an inquiry.

The data received yesterday dealt with deposits and withdrawals from accounts maintained by the Southern Methodist churchman in several Virginia and Washington banks during 1928 as head of the Virginia anti-Smith committee, as executor of an estate and as "James Cannon, Jr."

Bishop Cannon has denied the charges filed with the committee by Representative Tinkham, and has received permission from Nye to file a sworn statement later if he deems one necessary to prove "indubitably" they are unfounded.

Bishop Cannon still is confined to a hospital with arthritis and it is unlikely his physician would permit him to be questioned by the committee for some time.

PRESS PREJUDICE LINGERS, SAYS GIBBS

LONDON, Feb. 12.—(AP)—The popular press in the United States is still under the influence of traditional prejudices toward England, Sir Philip Gibbs, noted British journalist and novelist, said tonight in an address before the English Speaking Union.

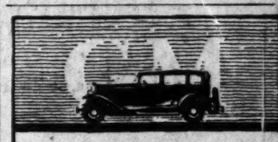

"They want to be fair and friendly—many American newspapers are," he declared, "but they cannot resist the temptation of twisting the lion's tail now and then—a weary and enfeebled lion, as they think.

"They have a rooted belief that British diplomacy is tricky and dishonest because that is the nature of the beast and that British imperialism still is inclined to be brutal and oppressive."

Sir Philip warmly commended the practice of the Associated Press in cabling stories reflecting the everyday life of the English people.

NAVAL STORES RATE REVISION OPPOSED

Southern Freight Association Hears Protests on Cancellations.

Opposition to proposed cancellation of inbound rates on any quantity lots of rosin and turpentine to five southeastern ports was voiced at a hearing before the Southern Freight Association here Thursday.

F. C. Hillyer, Jacksonville attorney, representing naval stores producers and port factors of the south Atlantic states and Savannah, Brunswick and Jacksonville, headed a delegation of 15 who opposed cancellation of present rates and substitution of fourth class rates on rosin and third class rates on turpentine in less than carloads. Other ports affected by the proposed change are Mobile and Pensacola.

S. H. Berg, chairman of the naval stores committee of the Jacksonville Chamber of Commerce, and C. H. Carson, of Savannah, testified that trucks had taken 25 per cent of the inbound naval stores business and would take more if the proposed rates go into effect. They also testified to the inroads being made by water carriers.

Other witnesses were E. C. Green, of Jacksonville; E. B. Gaines, of Savannah; Paul D. Cook, of Hamilton, Ohio; G. H. Farmer, of Birmingham, and George J. Bolender, of Kalamazoo, Mich.

COTTON WARNING SOUNDED BY LEGGE

Farm Board Head Points To Peril of 14,000,000-Bale Cotton Crop.

RALEIGH, N. C., Feb. 12.—(AP)—The opinion that a 14,000,000-bale cotton crop this year would sell for $232,000,000 less than a 10,000,000-bale crop was expressed tonight by Chairman Legge, of the farm board.

In an address before the Raleigh Chamber of Commerce, Legge said his estimate was based on compilations by a score of large cotton dealers. He strongly urged reduced production.

To the higher price for a 10,000,000-bale crop, Legge said the saving for planting, fertilizing, picking and ginning a 14,000,000-bale crop should be added.

Based on the average yield for the past two years, Legge said, to bring the crop down to a 10,000,000-bale basis, "would mean a reduction of more than 14,000,000 acres or 31 per cent less than was planted last year."

"The lowest estimate we have seen on the cost per acre for raising cotton is somewhere between $15 and $16 per acre, probably too low a figure for the cotton growers as a whole," he added. "Even on this basis the saving in cost would amount to over $200,000,000 or an average of more than $100 apiece for the 2,000,000 cotton growers of the south."

In addition, he said the compilation contemplated no use of the land theoretically taken out of cotton production which might profitably be turned to other crops.

Going into the new crop year with a carry-over of from 8,500,000 bales to 9,000,000 bales, Legge said, "it seems rather conclusive that the sound business policy for 1931 would be a sufficient curtailment of production to permit the consuming demand to make a material reduction in the stock on hand."

A 1931 cotton crop approximately as large as the last two, he asserted, would inevitably result in a still lower price for the commodity.

Quick Divorce Bill Passed in Arkansas

LITTLE ROCK, Ark., Feb. 12.—(AP)—Supported by a minister-member who declared there is "no hell on earth" to compare to that suffered by an unhappily married couple living together, the house of representatives Wednesday passed a bill to permit non-residents to obtain divorce decrees after 90 days' residence in Arkansas.

A bitter debate preceded the vote, which was 56 to 36. The emergency clause on the measure was defeated. The bill now goes to the senate.

Widely Divergent Views Are Espoused at Religious Forum

Clarence Darrow loves these same masses and anything that he sees hurting them will feel his venom even though he in turn feels theirs.

So literal belief in the Bible felt his scorn. After frankly declaring that the term religion as he would deal with it meant to him only man's dealings with gods, devils, angels, heavens and hells, he affirmed his lack of definite knowledge of these matters, but affirmed his disbelief in a future life and the inspiration of the Bible. He emphasized his conviction that this same Bible is the basis of all the western world's formal religion.

Declaring both the testaments to be full of errors in history, geography and science, he said the Divinity depicted acted in weird, uncanny, impossible and cruel fashion.

Scorns Literal Interpretations.

Scorning the literal interpretation of Genesis he cited as an example of injustice the fall of man as described in the Old Testament and ejected this on the grounds that a God which so ordered life was beyond the limits of mercy and justice.

Turning pointed comment on the story of Balaam and his ass and Joshua's feat with the sun, he claimed that these were only two of the scores of points in which the Old Testament stories if accepted literally would violate all laws of reason.

Progressing to the nativity he attacked the virgin birth of Christ as impossible and turned to Mark's tracing of Jesus' genealogy to David through Joseph as evidence of inconsistence in this tenet of faith. The tale of the wise men drew his scorn on the ground that the "star over the stable" is a gross violation of modern scientific precept.

Writing of New Testament.

The new testament he insisted was not even started until 40 years after the death of the Nazarene and John, who seemed to know most of Jesus' life and works, didn't write for 140 years.

As he neared his conclusion he took up the question of literal and allegorical interpretation of the Bible and demanded that those employing an allegorical or symbolical interpretation tell him how they would draw a line between the literal and the symbolical. At this point he emphasized again his idea that the Bible must of necessity be the foundation of both Christianity and Judaism and that when its validity crumbles, as he claims it is doing now, the theologies resting on it must fall with it.

In closing he reasserted his conviction that faiths persist through fear rather than through logic and the tenets of theology gain credence only through this fear and superstition.

Held By Thousands.

The "religion" that he so unmercifully flayed was not by any means the belief or beliefs that those who followed him depicted, but it was and is the belief that Clarence Darrow believes is held by thousands upon thousands today. In its real or fancied narrowness this strange man sees a mephitic darkness and into this darkness he is determined light shall fall even though he tread on more enlightened toes while hurling the illumination.

Reaching his side for a brief second or two before we were pushed aside by the throng that rushed to greet him after the conclusion of Rabbi Brickner's closing address, we were able to get an answer to a question. An answer that throws some light, perhaps, on the way in which that light which Darrow and others are seeking to bring is finding its way into the public mind.

Asked how the crowd had impressed him he hesitated not a moment in saying that it was most receptive and most intelligent. He added his belief that crowds in general are becoming more tolerant toward unorthodoxy not only in the south but in other sections as well. "I can rub 'em the wrong way nowadays and get away with it in perfect safety!" he chuckled.

He had words of praise for his opponents, all of whom paid high tribute to his character while differing with his beliefs or disbeliefs. Two of them declared him to be a fine religionist despite his professions of agnosticism and these "charges" provoked the typical, Darrowian jest, "If I don't watch my step these fellows will land me in a heaven I don't even believe in!"

A strange significance was lent to this light remark by the fact that many of the scores who milled about him at the close of the affair accompanied their congratulatory handshake with a firm announcement that they were Baptists or Methodists or Jews but they certainly had enjoyed his lively comment and liked him and it even if they didn't agree much with it.

Maybe they will get him into heaven at that! Imagine Mr. Darrow's embarrassment!

her in her expression of faith," he said. "Nor have I any protest against the great Hebrew group. We differ in interpreting Jesus, but the current of our spiritual life is from the same fountain. Nor have I a protest against this gallant knight who represents a protest against all religion. Thank God that any man is free in this south tonight to proclaim his doubts as I am to proclaim my faith."

All religions begin with faith in a God who reveals Himself to men, Dr. Jones pointed out. It takes two to make the revelation, and the revelation cannot be made unless He talks the language of the one to whom he is revealing, he said in answer to Darrow's jibes of revelations in Hebrew to Biblical characters. Further replying to Darrow's charges that the Bible contains geographical errors and inconsistencies, he declared that the revelation must be in relation to the stage of development of the person to whom the revelation is made. The child's report of an eclipse differs from that of the astronomer, yet both give a true story of the event, he reasoned. As humankind develops, the light grows more radiant, he added.

Truth in Rocks, Stars.

"God's truth may be revealed in the rocks or in the stars, in a book or in human history. But whatever the truth reveals, not until it is spoken in the throne-room of the individual spirit, convincing his judgment, convicting his conscience, and challenging his will, can it have the accent of divine authority for him," Dr. Jones said. "All religion is essentially an expression of faith. But so far from this being a substitute for knowledge, one's faith must grow out of one's knowledge. Indeed in a very real sense one's faith depends upon one's interpretation of his knowledge. The spiritual sequence is ever 'I know' and therefore 'I believe.' Whether one's knowledge will justify one's faith is the function of reason for 'each man must be ready to give a reason for the faith that is within in.' I do not know all that I believe, but I ought to know why I believe. I do not understand all that I believe, but I should understand why I believe it. This process is not peculiar to religion. The hypothesis of the laboratory is knowledge already verified, plus what it is believed will be proved to be true."

For this reason, Dr. Jones said, religion turns to the scientific searcher after truth as to a friend, and welcomes all the knowledge of this universe which a laboratory or observatory can furnish. "Science furnishes the data of experimental knowledge, religion furnishes an interpretation of that knowledge. Reason holds her sway and order dominates the panoramic parade of the world."

Quake Is Order of Law.

Turning to Darrow, he exclaimed: "I knew that Darrow was an agnostic in religion, but I did not believe that he was an agnostic in science until he said that this is not an orderly universe." The earthquake, Dr. Jones explained, is just as much a part of the order of law as the kiss of the sun on the dewdrop in the morning. "Order," he said, "means the consistent procedure of cause to effect that rules throughout the universe."

When science seeks to interpret its data, it becomes a religious philosophy, Dr. Jones said. Religion knows nothing of when the process had its beginning, nor how, but only maintains that whenever and however, it was God who created, he explained. "But there is still the eager question of the anxious heart, what kind of God willed this orderly procession of countless worlds? Intelligence amounting to omniscience is manifested in the infinite intricacies of His laws, but does He care for men? Just here is to be found the essential element of the Christian religion. It is the faith that the God of Creation is the one whom Jesus called Father. This Jesus whom I know is not dependent for his reality upon the accuracy of his biographers. The definite portrait of an incomparable person cannot be marred by the inaccuracies of His biographers. The men who behold Him ask 'Is this not God?'"

Dr. Jones declared that his faith is not dependent upon any metaphysical explanation of how God is revealed in Jesus. That men according to their training and temperament should work out for themselves philosophic explanations of His personality is natural and inevitable, and any one of these explanations may be true, or not one of them may be true, so no one of them is essential to Christian faith, he said. "From this standpoint the teaching that Jesus was born of a virgin may be true, but belief in this method of His birth is not essential to the Christian religion."

A question Dr. Jones was greatly interested in was "Who did Jesus think He was?" In discussing His primary sense of personality, "the one He tried to translate into life," Dr. Jones said Jesus was primarily conscious of being the son of God. "He did not debate it. It was the assumption of His life. Here is the 'holy of holies,' the spirit of the man. Who am I? is the most important question one can ask concerning himself. That is the central fact about any man, because that will determine the role which he will seek to play in the drama of life," Dr. Jones said.

"It is of profound significance that the man who was most clearly conscious of being the son of God was also mostly clearly conscious of His brotherhood to all men. There lived in the heart of Jesus all men without distinction as to race or color or creed. 'All are children of God and are my brothers'."

"We make a spiritual interpretation of the universe. Nothing is so much needed in the world today as to give a spiritual significance to the world in which we live."

Dr. Jones, well known to large numbers of Atlantans through his former residence and pastorate here, received a great ovation both at the opening and closing of his remarks.

O'Brien

ament conference—for scrapping prejudices. After an acknowledgment of his introduction—an acknowledgment which included a tribute to two southern evangelists, Sam Jones and Sam Small—Mr. O'Brien said:

"Clarence Darrow is infinitely better than the beliefs and creeds he advances, and the rest of us are not as good."

He said that all of the things "for which we love and respect Clarence Darrow, the love of the underdog and his sapient democracy, he borrowed and inherited from Christianity."

Admitting that "religion has no monopoly on truth or corner on salvation," O'Brien turned to his own church.

"The enemies of the Catholic church," he declared, "say that it believes that no one outside can be saved. That is not so. It has never attempted to set bounds to God's mercy. It has taught that it is easier to be saved in the great church founded by Christ, but that good people outside may be saved. Even the agnostic may reach the goal of eternal life if he will only choose to rally."

The Catholic, O'Brien said, might forget the kicks of the agnostic at the Bible for his church came ahead of the Bible and borrowed the old testament from the Jews. The Catholic church, he contended, compiled the Book of Books and gave it to civilization, but the church was not founded on the Bible.

Repplies to Darrow's Thrusts.

Again returning to Mr. Darrow's thrusts at the Bible as "mythology and fables," O'Brien scored with the big audience when he said he would leave to defend the Book "the Jew who wrote it and the Protestant who founded his church on it."

"From Peter down to the pope, whose voice was heard throughout the world today, every dogma and doctrine of the Catholic church was taught by the Apostles.

"I regret, I am sure, to see that Protestantism has fallen away from the doctrines of the church, which they borrowed from the Catholics, and tossed them away in a war between modernists and fundamentalists."

The breakdown of Christianity, which he lamented, prevails more in the northern section of the United States than elsewhere, O'Brien said.

South True to Teachings.

"With all the sneers about the Bible belt," he said, "you people of the south have remained truer to its teachings than the people of the north."

Referring to his church's part in giving the magna charta to the world, O'Brien spoke of the fundamentals it has championed throughout the ages and proclaimed it today to be the enemy of atheism, agnosticism, socialism and communism.

Indications that anybody went to hear one speaker in preference to another were few and far between. When Mr. Darrow had concluded there were a few seats vacated, but more people, held at the door while the famous criminal lawyer was pleading agnosticism, came in before O'Brien started. A chilling atmosphere in the auditorium drove a few people home but the big audience, wrapped for the most part in heavy coats, sat through until the speeches had all been made.

Ingratiating himself with the audience to begin with, and reiterating his affection for the southland as he ended, the Catholic-lawyer, more than either of the other speakers, stressed the fundamentals of religion and paid his tribute to a section of the country which has held firm to the faith.

But, even so, his frankness in speaking for his church was in harmony with the general plea for Christian unity which the Jew and the Protestant made. He was quick to get into the heart of his subject, attempted no plays upon emotion and spoke rapidly but distinctly.

Brickner

of straws before the program. The remark he made at this time contrasted significantly with that made by Clarence Darrow. The latter, first to present his views of agnosticism, decried his misfortune in having to speak first as a "bad break." Rabbi Brickner had remarked, when he drew the straw that gave him the final word, "It is fitting that the oldest religion be presented last," implying that not luck but divine direction governed their fortunes.

Rabbi Brickner, in giving his definition of Judaism, asserted "It is not a belief, it is not a creed, it is a way of life morally disciplined by 3,600 years of experience and transfused by the consciousness of divinity and worthwhileness of life."

Tolerance Chief Note.

Tolerance was the chief note stressed by the expounder of Judaism as well as by his associates in the symposium.

"We do not seek religious uniformity, but religious unity," he said. "Where there is no understanding, there is no tolerance. Together is the greatest word in the English language. We are living in a world where unless we live together we will be plunged over the precipice."

"Man thinking at his highest, feeling deepest and doing best," was the meaning of religion as interpreted by Rabbi Brickner. "That something which causes men to think highest, feel deepest and do best—call it what you will—is what I choose to call God," the rabbi stated.

"Darrow," he said of his colleague on the night's program, "is religious at heart, despite what he has told you tonight. Any man who would travel 2,000 miles at his own expense to give his services for a man he believed accused unjustly, has the soul of religion in him."

Calls Darrow "Bellhop."

He alluded to Darrow as "God's cosmic bellhop." He explained the agnosticism of the man as follows: "When a boy Darrow discovered he missed heaven, so he has gone up and down the country raising hell ever since."

Referring to the old Jewish doctrine, the unity of God, as the central theme of that religion and one in which all religions could unite, he pointed out that the "corrolary of the unity of God was the doctrine of the brotherhood of man."

Following the forum, Dr. Brickner praised his audience for its display of keen interest and tolerance. I was impressed with the preponderance of men present here tonight," he said. "It has always been maintained that religion is the woman's domain. Tonight we have a sign that men are beginning to give thought to their religion and spiritual way of life. Either it is an evidence of more thinking on this score, or a result of the economic depression."

MYSTERY BLAZE IN VACANT HOUSE

Fires of undetermined origin did considerable damage to a dwelling and a store Thursday night, according to reports at headquarters. A vacant one-story frame house at 634 Kennedy street was discovered in flames by Patrolman J. M. Tuggle, whose home is situated directly across the street. Search of the premises after the fire was extinguished failed to disclose the cause of two loud explosions which Mr. Tuggle reported hearing in the fire's early stages.

A second-hand furniture store owned by A. Auerbach at 362 Decatur street was considerably damaged by fire which started under the basement floor. A five-gallon can containing about two gallons of kerosene was found on the second floor by firemen, according to police reports.

PITTMAN JURORS UNABLE TO AGREE

guilty of murder, which would send Pittman to the electric chair. Attorneys Tom Shackleford, of Athens, and Reuben A. Garland, speaking for the defense, contended that Pittman was justified in the slaying, on the ground that the fears of a reasonable man for his life had been aroused by threats charged against Fowler by the defense.

With Pittman in court were his brother-in-law and sister, Professor and Mrs. Frank Ward, of Athens, and a number of friends.

Testimony Thursday included the appearance in the witness box of Reuben Wright, former husband of Fowler's widow. Wright testified for the state, declaring that he would not believe Mrs. Fowler on oath. Mrs. Fowler had testified Wednesday that her husband was drunk at the time of the shooting, witnesses for the state claiming that Fowler was sober. Following Wright's testimony, the defense recalled Mrs. Fowler. On Wednesday she had stated that she would not know her former husband if he walked in the courtroom, as she had not seen him for 12 years. On Thursday, however, she testified that she did know Wright, and had been married to him, but that she would not believe him on oath.

Bob Hammell, of Chamblee, testified that he was with Fowler up to 4:30 p. m. on the Thursday when defense witnesses charged Fowler made threats against Pittman. Hammell denied that Fowler had made any threats while with him.

The shooting was said to have followed an effort by Fowler to recover $10 rent paid Pittman. In his statement to the jury, Pittman said Fowler became angry when he was told he could not get the money back as it had been paid to the property owner, and that Fowler threatened to "get" him. The defense alleged that Fowler made repeated visits and telephone calls to Pittman's office, threatening violence unless the money was returned. The state, through rebuttal witnesses, sought to show that Fowler did not make the alleged threats.

MACHINE GUN SLUGS KILL LIQUOR RUNNER

KANSAS CITY, Feb. 12.—(AP)—Machine gun fire today was fatal for Jimmy Howard, known to police as a gangster and liquor runner.

A few hours after Howard was wounded by nearly a dozen bullets, police, acting on a tip, arrested 17 men in the rear room of a flower shop.

Howard fell before the bullets of a machine gunner who got out of a motor car, fired a round of shots through the plate glass window of the A. B. C. Auto Livery office, and then escaped in the car with two or three companions.

the papers was appointed under another receivership, that of Southern Publishers, Inc., the papers' holding company, also headed by Colonel Lea.

Larkin Crouch, Southern Publishers receiver authorized to vote the stock, is one of the directors. He named the others with approval of Chancellor James Newman, of Nashville, who granted the Southern Publishers receivership.

In the hearing here, Crouch disapproved the financing plan presented for Colonel Lea as being indefinite and offering no assurance of solving the papers' money troubles. W. E. Norvell, Jr., Nashville attorney for Colonel Lea and Southern Publishers, said it was tentative, but probably would become a certainty by February 19. He urged its approval as one which would "offer a permanent management," rather than a "temporary management controlled by a creditor."

The directors' petition said the M. & O. Paper Company agreed to pay all unsecured claims in cash, including two totaling $45,000, presented by the Broadway National and Commerce-Union banks, Nashville, and first disputed by the creditors.

In addition, the paper company agreed not to press its claims of $368,000 for six months. Norvell failed in an effort to amend the decree to prevent the board making any new contract for paper within that time, or changing the status of the M. & O.'s claims, $110,000, of which was disputed by the receivers.

The paper company also advanced a $200,000 line of credit.

George Morris, until recently vice president of the papers, is president of the board. Other members are Colonel J. W. Canada, Memphis attorney; J. C. Bradford, Nashville investment banker, and Crouch.

The papers' co-receivers were allowed a joint $5,000 fee. They are Paul Dillard, Memphis businessman, and Enoch Brown, Jr., former vice president in charge of advertising.

The final disposition of the papers, it was explained, depends upon the outcome of the Southern Publishers receivership which holds stock of the papers, but which is pledged to the Minnesota & Ontario Paper Company as security for a bond issue.

Action taken today puts the papers now under the control of the board of directors chosen by the receivers for the Southern Publishers, Inc., and approved by the Nashville chancery court, which placed Southern Publishers, headed by Colonel Lea, in receivership.

Baker Joins Pershing Opposing Impositions On American Command

Italy Appeals for American Troops—First Division Ordered Into Line—Foch Charged With Duties of Co-ordinating Allied Armies, Leading Eventually To His Elevation To Commander-in-Chief.

BY GENERAL JOHN J. PERSHING.

CHAPTER XXXIII.

Secretary of War Baker went to London to discuss with the British authorities the prospects for additional shipping and also the general subject of munitions. While there he sent me the following telegram March 25 embodying suggestions from the prime minister which showed the deep anxiety of the British:

"I have just had a long talk with the prime minister. He urges three proposals for your consideration:

1—That our divisions in France be placed immediately in line to relieve French divisions for service elsewhere, quiet sectors being chosen for troops with least training.

2—That all available engineer troops be taken from lines of communication work and sent to aid of British engineers preparing positions back of present lines. It is urged that supension of our work would be but temporary and that the work suggested is imperative.

3—That infantry be sent first of the entire six divisions to be transported by British in view of present acute needs of that army. No answer to the foregoing is necessary until I see you tomorrow when we can discuss the suggestions fully."

As to the question of using our troops, General Petain, in response to my offer of assistance on my visit to Compeigne, had already stated that the best thing we could do for the moment would be to replace French divisions in quiet sectors so that they could go to the aid of the British or elsewhere, as might be desired, and preparations were under way to that end.

Meanwhile, Sir Douglas Haig, British commander, had asked for engineers and heavy artillery, of which three regiments of the former were placed at his disposal at once and the personnel of two regiments of the latter about to arrive were offered.

I went to Versailles March 26 and talked with General Giardino who had replaced General Cadorna as Italy's military representative on the supreme war council. General Giardino made an appeal for an allotment of our troops. He argued that their presence would be tangible proof of the intense feeling of co-operation that inspired the American nation, that it would encourage those Italian working people who had been in America, that it would increase their confidence in the successful outcome of the war, and above all that they needed help.

No doubt much of this was true, but it would have opened the way for similar concessions to the other Allies, and in the end our forces would have been frittered away probably to little or no purpose. These appeals by the Allies, presented anew from time to time, only served to fix in our minds the idea that each was thinking in terms of its own army rather than of benefit to the Allies as a whole.

Mr. Baker returned from London that evening and I met him at the Gare du Dord in Paris. The station presented a scene that could never be forgotten. The terror-stricken crowds from threatened villages and farms were fleeing they knew not whither, many of them for the second time during this war, from an enemy whose invasion of their country in days gone by had, perhaps, driven out their fathers and mothers before them.

Frightfulness of War.

War in its effects upon the armies themselves is frightful enough, but the terror and the suffering that it causes women and children are incomparably worse. These thousands were leaving everything behind them, going to some distant part of their country to become, many of them, dependent upon their friends, others, perchance friendless and penniless, to live by charity. There was even then hope that they might return later, and through the help of the government rebuild their homes.

But will the shadow of this dreadful experience ever pass, or will war come again to cause like suffering to their children?

No one can answer, but all can strive to the end that this experience, which is the heritage of lands where the embers of hatred and jealousy are kept alive at the fireside to be fanned into flaming war by ambitious and powerful leaders, may come no more.

My diary notes the following:

Chaumont, Friday, March 29, 1918. Held conference with the secretary of war and General Bliss yesterday on joint recommendation of military representatives of the war council.

At Petain's request, the first division ordered to battle line, which Mr. Baker said people at home would enthusiastically approve.

Mr. Paul Cravath dined with us this evening, and speaking of unity, favored placing control in the hands of a committee composed of Marshal Haig, General Petain and myself.

The situation had become so serious that the military representatives seemed to think it necessary to recommend that all previous plans for the shipment of American troops be disregarded and that nothing but infantry and machine gun units be shipped until otherwise directed by the supreme war council. This they did in the form of a joint (or unanimous) note, which was, of course, approved by the supreme war council.

I was very much surprised at the attitude of General Bliss, our military representative with the council, as without his consent the joint note could not have been submitted to the council.

The presence of the secretary of war fortunately afforded me the opportunity to discuss with him not only the demands of the particular situation existing at that time but the general attitude of our Allies regarding the manner in which Americans should be employed.

When the joint note was presented to Secretary Baker, I pointed out to him and General Bliss that the proposal, if approved by the president, would place the disposition of American units entirely in the hands of the supreme war council and take them quite out of our control, even for training, and would without doubt destroy all possibility of our forming an American army.

The secretary was as strongly opposed to any such an outcome as I, and after some discussion he dictated his views in a cable to President Wilson explicitly recommending that the control of our forces should be retained by our commander-in-chief and that the joint note be approved only in that sense.

Baker to Wilson.

Secretary Baker's cable to the president read, in part:

The foregoing resolutions (of the military representatives on the supreme council) were considered by General Bliss, General Pershing and me. Paragraph three proposes a change in the order of shipment of American troops to France and necessarily postpones the organization and training of complete American divisions as parts of an independent American army. This ought to be conceded only in view of the present critical situation and continued only so long as that situation necessarily demands it.

The question of replacements will continue to embarrass the British and French governments, and efforts to satisfy that need by retaining American units assigned to them must be anticipated, but we must keep in mind the formation of an American army, while, at the same time, we must not seem to sacrifice joint efficiency at a critical moment to that object. Therefore I recommend that you express your approval of the joint note in the following sense:

"Such purpose of the American government is to render the fullest co-operation and aid, and therefore the recommendation of the military representatives with regard to the preferential transportation of American infantry and machine gun units in the present emergency is approved.

"Such units when transported will be under the direction of the commander in chief of the American expeditionary forces, and will be assigned for training and use by him in his discretion. He will use these and all other military forces of the United States under his command in such manner as to render the greatest military assistance, keeping in mind always the determination of this government to have its various military forces collected, as speedily as their training and the military situation will permit, into an independent American army, acting in concert with the armies of Great Britain and France and all arrangements made by him for their temporary training and service will be made with that end in view."

This action by the military representatives just at this crisis was intended to put the weight of the supreme war council behind the idea of maintaining the strength of Allied units by Americans as a policy. The text of the joint note made it entirely plain that this was their purpose.

The message forwarding the joint note with Mr. Baker's comment was answered by a cable from Washington dated March 30, which stated:

The president concurs in the joint note of the permanent military representatives of the supreme war council in the sense formulated in your number 67 March 28, and wishes you to regard yourself authorized to decide questions of immediate co-operation or replacement.

It was thought that this statement, coming from the president, would check, at least for the time being, the demands of the Allies that we provide units for building up their divisions, but their insistence continued.

The president's message was followed March 30 by a cable from the department, which stated:

The recommendations of secretary of war to president . . . that preferential transportation be given to American infantry and machine gun units in present emergency understood and will be followed.

It went on to say that these units pertaining to three divisions, the Third, Fifth and Seventy-seventh, would be sent at once, and those of three other divisions about May 1.

Replying April 3 to the department's cable, I emphasized that it was "not intended that our units shall replace the losses of British or French organizations, and therefore our artillery should be held in readiness to follow when called for," although it was possible that the situation might become "so serious that some of our infantry units will be forced to serve with British temporarily."

My intentions were further indicated by saying: "Americans must not lose sight of the purpose to build up divisions and corps of their own," and also: "we must avoid the tendency to incorporate our infantry into British divisions where it will be used up and never relieved."

My cable recommended that the infantry of two divisions should be sent by British shipping and two by our own, but that present plans should go no further than this. It was my purpose not to become too deeply involved in an agreement that would make it impossible later to form our own independent force under our own officers.

British See Foch's Authority Limited.

With reference to the meeting at Doullens, mentioned in the preceding chapter, there was much difference of opinion on what course to pursue, according to General Bliss, who reported the situation to the Secretary and me. President Poincare presided. M. Clemenceau, M. Loucheur, Lord Milner, Marshal Haig, General Sir Henry Wilson, General Foch and others being present.

One suggestion made prior to the formal meeting was that M. Clemenceau be selected Allied commander-in-chief, with General Foch his chief of staff, but, as we have seen, the conference itself agreed that General Foch, as the senior military member of the council, should be charged with co-ordinating the action of the Allied armies on the western front.

It was, however, the prevalent British view that Foch was simply a liaison officer between the two armies, with advisory and co-ordinating authority only. Although inadequate to meet all circumstances, even this concession was a stride in the right direction, and his position was soon to be more clearly defined. In fact, President Wilson sent General Foch the following message March 29:

May I not convey to you my sincere congratulations on your new authority. Such unity of command is a most hopeful augury of ultimate success. We are following with profound interest the bold and brilliant action of your forces.

Of course Mr. Cravath's idea for unity of command, as mentioned in my diary, was never seriously considered by anyone in authority, and it fell short of absolute unity of command, but it would have been more likely to have met the situation than the plan adopted by the supreme war council, which was a thinly disguised attempt on its part to control military operations.

The failure of the scheme was to have been expected, because it would almost certainly have the effect of relieving the commanders-in-chief of their responsibility and placing it in the hands of an agent not empowered to do more than consult the commanders-in-chief in an endeavor to get their approval before taking action. It was entirely a makeshift.

It fortunately led to the selection of an Allied commander-in-chief, which was probably what some of its far-sighted advocates thought would happen.

Tomorrow: Foch made commander-in-chief; Pershing and Petain near clash on question of American army.

Creation of U. S. Farm Board Mistake, W. T. Anderson Says; Sees Abolition in Few Years

Abolition of the federal farm board within the next few years on account of its being "impractical" was predicted Thursday by W. T. Anderson, editor of The Macon Telegraph, in an address at the meeting of the City Club in Atlanta in the Piedmont hotel. Anderson expressed the opinion that "Georgia will snap out of it" and solve this state's agricultural problems through the creation of markets for the farmers.

Frequent references were made to the success of Colquitt county in dealing with farm problems, Anderson taking this county as an example of what can be done by injecting business-like methods and intelligence into farming. Several other south Georgia counties share Colquitt county's success in this line, and Hall county, in north Georgia, is rapidly going ahead with the establishment of farmers' markets and the placing of farming on a sound basis, he said.

Anderson said that originally he advocated creation of the farm board, but he has come to the conclusion that the board is a mistake. "It creates an impression and attitude of paternalism and dependence, when farmers must do for themselves," he declared.

Bankers Aiding Farmers.

Work of the Georgia Bankers' Association in aiding the farmer to solve his problems was related by Anderson, who told of the great work in Moultrie, Colquitt county, of Jim Beninson as agent between the bank and the farmers. He commended as a "wise policy" the backing of county agricultural agents by the banks, and said "Georgia is awakening to the realization of man's duty to his fellow man. People are willing to hear the troubles of other men and help solve them."

"The Georgia Bankers' Association efforts to aid in solution of the farm problems are more fraught with optimism than anything else I know of," Anderson said. He opened his address with the declaration that the "great trouble of Georgia is our extreme poverty." This state has been afflicted since the sixties and with less excuse than any place in the world, he said.

The unique advantage of the southern farmer has been his ability to grow cotton, a product known to be kept for 50 years in a perfect state of preservation, where farmers of other sections have had to grow perishable products, he pointed out. "And statistics show that of the 400,000 persons living within 50 miles of the Macon courthouse, the average ones do not see $140 a year."

The World War resulted in 26,000,000 deaths of men, women and children, and it cost $406,000,000,000, or twice the estimated wealth of the United States at the beginning of the war, and "today is pay day," Anderson said. "Today is the day for saving and denying, for we have lost the patronage and the earning and spending ability of 26,000,000 people."

Anderson drew a vivid picture of the loss from Sherman's march through Georgia and the resultant distress and misfortune from carpetbaggers and from labor being set free. "Chaos confounded and multiplied," he said, telling how the state became bound in a cotton slavery, and declaring that an overwhelming surplus of cotton has been produced since 1865, so that the farmers produced cotton at an average cost of 10 1-2 cents a pound and sold it at 9 3-4 cents a pound.

"There is a world surplus today of 8,000,000 bales, and before new cotton can bring a profit it has to wait its turn with that much before it," Anderson said. He told how the boll weevil for 12 years has made the Georgia bankers unable to finance cotton farming, and said that recently the association undertook to find a way to help the farmers, and group meetings have been held over the state on the subject of crops other than cotton.

Small towns where the merchants skin the farmers should go out of business, but those rendering a real service to the farmers by providing a market where the farmer can get and pay a fair price will flourish and prosper, he said.

Anderson said that Georgia is spending $100,000,000 a year for food bought outside of the state, and that this is a problem that should be solved by helping the Georgia farmers reach a self-sustaining basis. The $100,000,000 should be kept at home, he declared.

"There are no idle farms in Colquitt county or vacant houses in Moultrie, because Moultrie gives a cash market for the farmer every day in the year. Why should that not be true of all Georgia? The Moultrie bank collected $60,000 on farm loans before it touched the cotton money and it declared an extra dividend of 20 per cent and it has $2,250,000 of farmers' money on deposit. Dozens of other banks in Georgia do the same.

"The towns have a real responsibility in providing markets for the farmers. Civic clubs, bringing men together, do a great deal for Georgia," he said.

FLOOD MEASURE VOTE FRIDAY

WASHINGTON, Feb. 12.—(AP)—Final action on the Wilson bill to transfer to the federal government the cost of lands subjected to lower Mississippi floods through levee setbacks was set today for Friday by the house flood control committee.

A compromise was in prospect following preliminary consideration today during which Representative Wilson, democrat, Louisiana, outlined the purposes of the measure.

Numerous committee members expressed opposition to a change in the law which would relieve the states and local interests of any share in the cost of levee changes.

Wilson contended the extent of levee setbacks embodied in the army plan was entirely unforeseen at the time the 1928 act was passed and that large areas of land would be exposed to floods without any reimbursement to owners.

Some members who supported the Wilson plan took the position, however, that the federal government should not have to pay for land on which the actual levee foundations are built.

PRESBYTERIANS PLAN MEETING AT MONTREAT

CHARLOTTE, N. C., Feb. 12.—(AP)—The next general assembly of the Southern Presbyterian church will convene May 28 at Montreat, N. C.

The Rev. J. G. Garth, editor of the Presbyterian Standard, announced today he had been advised by Dr. Thomas W. Currie, moderator, of Austin, Texas, that drouth conditions made it impossible to gather at the School of the Ozarks, Hollister, Mo., as originally planned.

MACON PLUMBER FREED UNDER $5,000 BOND

MACON, Ga., Feb. 12.—(AP)—B. Ray Irby, Macon, plumber, Thursday afternoon obtained his liberty on $5,000 bond assessed by Judge H. A. Mathews, pending investigation by a Houston county grand jury of the "river-swamp frolic" Sunday afternoon which resulted in the fatal wounding of Mrs. Robert White, 26-year-old Twiggs county woman.

Baby's "Blue" Eyes Lack Color, Doctor Explains

NEW YORK, Feb. 12.—(UP)—The reason why most babies' eyes are blue at birth although they may turn later to gray, hazel or brown, was explained today by Dr. I. H. Godlove, in charge of the color exhibition at the Museum of Science and Industry.

"The blue appearance is not due to coloring matter," he said, "but to the texture of the iris of the eye. This texture has the peculiar property of "scattering" whatever light it strikes. It is this scattered light we see, and the eye appears blue because the wave lengths responsible for the color scatter many times more than the wave lengths of other colors.

"As the infant grows the body deposits pigments in the iris, causing the eye to take on the color it will maintain throughout adult life. If no color is deposited, the individual remains blue-eyed."

EUROPEAN STORM ENDANGERS MANY

LONDON, Feb. 12.—(AP)—Shipping in the English channel, the Irish coast and in the Bay of Biscay was badly buffeted by a fierce gale which rose suddenly yesterday and continued to blow all day today with little diminished force.

One steamer was reported in distress tonight. She was the British freighter Swiftway, of 3,917 tons, which left Las Palmas, Canary Island, February 1, for Limerick, Ireland. Her steering gear was carried away and she was drifting helplessly in the vicinity of southweset Ireland.

Two tugs left Cobh (Queenstown) to assist her.

High seas raged in the channel and drove all sorts of craft to shelter in various ports, a large number taking refuge in Plymouth sound while a score of Welsh trawlers, fishing in Irish waters, sheltered in Bantry bay.

A number of vessels reported more or less damaged as a result of the pounding to which they had been subjected.

TOBACCO ACREAGE INCREASE FEARED

WASHINGTON, Feb. 12.—(AP)—The opinion that an increase in tobacco production in 1931 proportionate to the increase in 1930 would be "disastrous" to tobacco growers was expressed today by Vice Chairman Stone, of the farm board.

Indications are, Stone said, that the total tobacco crop this year would be as large as last year.

The vice chairman placed the 1930 excess production in bright flue-cured tobacco at 50,000,000 to 60,000,000 pounds greater than that produced in 1929.

HOUSE VOTES TO ALLOW MIDDIES COMMISSIONS

WASHINGTON, Feb. 12.—(AP)—The house today amended the navy supply bill so as to permit all the midshipmen in this year's class at Annapolis to accept commissions. The vote was 91 to 50.

On the motion of Representative Vinson, democrat, Georgia, the house struck from the bill a provision limiting the number of officers to 5,499.

Vinson asserted unless this restriction were removed about 200 of this year's graduates would be "given some pay and turned loose to join the army of unemployed."

Existence of Vandalism Cult at Harvard Hinted

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Feb. 13.—(AP)—Dropped from the rolls of Harvard University for deficiency in studies, Edward K. Jenkins, of Warrenton, Va., and Daniel Merriman of Cambridge, today were accused of acts of vandalism at the exclusive Groton school.

Rev. Endicott Peabody, Groton headmaster, complained to Harvard officials that the students had visited Groton on several occasions and, among other things, removed a crucifix from the school chapel.

A state detective was assigned by District Attorney Bishop to investigate the reported existence of a secret society at Harvard, admission to which was based on acts of lawlessness.

How Good Doctors Treat Bad Colds

Medical writers agree that the important point in the treatment of a cold, or cough due to a cold, is to relieve the congestion in the nose and throat, thereby preventing serious complications which may follow a neglected cold. To stop this congestion calomel was the accepted and standard remedy until Calotabs, the improved calomel compound tablet, was introduced.

Now that science has robbed calomel of its nausea and danger, making it pleasant to take and perfectly safe for general use, over forty million Calotabs are consumed in the U. S. yearly with only the most pleasant and satisfactory results. In millions of homes Calotabs have proven their superiority in the prompt relief of colds and coughs due to colds.

One or two Calotabs at bedtime with a glass of sweet milk or water. No salts necessary. No nausea, nor the slightest interference with your eating, work or pleasure. Next morning the congestion has subsided, your cold or cough is relieved, your system is thoroughly purified and you are feeling fine with a hearty appetite for breakfast. Eat what you wish—no danger.

HANSELL CHARGE DROPPED BY COURT

Indictment Is Nolle Prossed on Recommendation of Boykin.

William A. Hansell, indicted in the municipal graft probe, Thursday was free of all charges against him through action of the Fulton county superior court in acting on a recommendation of Solicitor-General John A. Boykin and nolle prossing the accusations.

Hansell demanded a trial on the charges and when the case was called for Thursday morning before Judge E. D. Thomas, Solicitor Boykin sent a message to Assistant Solicitor Walter LeCraw, recommending that he ask the court to nolle prosse the complaints.

Judge Thomas immediately followed the suggestion.

In commenting on the action, Mr. Boykin stated that further investigation of the charges that Hansell stole $200 worth of building materials from the borough while he was chief of construction in 1924 led him to believe the case should be quashed.

Hansell was defeated for re-election as chief of construction in June of 1928 by Clarke Donaldson, his former chief aide.

Thursday Hansell issued the following statement regarding the action of the court in his case:

"Naturally I am very much gratified over the action of the solicitor-general in nolle prossing the indictment which was brought against me last year. I felt sure that when the solicitor-general had an opportunity to investigate the merits of the case more fully that this would be the outcome of it.

"During my six years in office as chief of construction of the city of Atlanta I expended about $15,000,000 of the public's money, according to the records of the comptroller of Atlanta. The fact that the grand jury and other investigating bodies who examined into the graft of the city hall were able to find nothing against me except an alleged theft seven years ago of $200 worth of building material is itself a vindication of my record. We have the documentary evidence to prove beyond the slightest question that the material I was accused of stealing had been purchased by me from well-known building material dealers here in Atlanta in the regular course of business, charged to my personal account, delivered by them on their own trucks to my home, and paid for by me out of my personal funds in due course.

"I wish to take this occasion to thank my many friends for their expressions of confidence in me during the past year when the shadow of suspicion was cast on me."

"Alfalfa Bill" Tells New "Governor Story"

KANSAS CITY, Feb. 12.—(AP)—Suffering a touch of indigestion from eating "store food" Governor William H. (Alfalfa Bill) Murray paused here today en route to Oklahoma City from Springfield, Ill., where he made a Lincoln address last night.

Despite the pangs of his malady Alfalfa Bill commented facetiously and otherwise on many topics.

And it was revealed what the governor of Oklahoma said to the governor of Illinois.

"We have a world of moonshiners in the hills of Pushmatana county, I told him. If the oil ever plays out, we'll hook their stills to the pipe lines."

And the governor of Illinois said to the governor of Oklahoma, "I want to get in on that hookup."

At least that is one of the stories related to the reporters by Murray as he waited for a train.

CHINESE WILL PUSH ANTI-FOREIGN MOVE

SHANGHAI, Feb. 12.—(AP)—Foreign Minister O. T. Wang told newspapermen at a dinner tonight the nationalist government was resolved to "exert the maximum effort" to end extra-territorial rights of foreign nations in China if present negotiations are not successful soon.

Through these rights, nationals of 21 nations have had for 80 years the privilege of trial in China in courts presided over by their own countrymen.

The Chinese government, said Mr. Wang, long had endeavored to terminate extra-territoriality, and was resolved at this time to "exert the maximum effort to attain this end, and the powers' further delay would only intensify China's efforts."

SHOALS CONFEREES MEET AGAIN TODAY

WASHINGTON, Feb. 12.—(AP)—Muscle Shoals conferees will make another effort tomorrow to reach an agreement.

A conference scheduled for today was postponed by Senator McNary, republican, Oregon, chairman of the senate conferees, because of urgent business in the senate.

The latest Wurzbach proposal, contemplating that not less than 85 per cent of the power shall be used in the manufacture of fertilizer and not more than 15 per cent in electrochemical products, will be offered the senate managers.

In event of rejection, the house conferees will renew their request that a disagreement be reported to each house.

KNIFE HURLER FELLS NEGRO NIGHT PROWLER

MEMPHIS, Tenn., Feb. 12.—(AP)—A negro prowler was near death today due to the accurate aim with a knife of Tony Curcio, 30, farmer, who was awakened early today by the cries of his stepson, Alex Bassi, 20, who had grappled with the intruder but was being bested in the struggle.

Seizing a butcher knife Curcio let the weapon fly at the negro, William Brown, 30. The tip of the blade struck the man in the eye.

Police were summoned and he was taken to a hospital. His condition was described as critical.

Bassi suffered severe bruises from blows of a rubber mallet wielded by the negro.

5-YEAR-PLAN AUTHOR TAKEN FROM POST

MOSCOW, Feb. 12.—(AP)—Gleb Krzhizanovsky, generally recognized as the author of the five-year plan for industrialization of soviet Russia, has been removed as vice chairman of the state planning commission and appointed to membership in the supreme economic council with supervision over central management of power stations.

A brief announcement of the transfer today said he had been relieved at his own request but although his new job is of considerable importance it is not regarded as quite so important as that from which he has been retired and the change was interpreted as in the nature of a demotion.

MIAMI POLICE OPEN DRIVE ON MENDICANTS

MIAMI, Fla., Feb. 12.—(AP)—The police department got a new squad today—the professional beggar detail.

Public Safety Director S. D. McCreary appointed ten new patrolmen to clear downtown streets of professional vagrants and beggars.

With the area approaching the height of the tourist season, McCreary said, beggars are flocking into Miami. Hereafter, orders stated, the vagrants and mendicants will be given their choice of leaving for the north by train immediately or being taken in a daily trip by patrol wagon to the northern line of Dade county.

BIRTH CONTROL LAW FACES ATTACKS TODAY

Margaret Sanger and Others Seek To Liberalize Measure.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 12.—(UP)—A portion of the work to which Anthony Comstock devoted his righteous life will be attacked before a senate committee tomorrow by Margaret Sanger and others campaigning for liberalization of birth control laws.

There are still a few in Washington who remember the great bulk and ginger-colored side-whiskers of the New England vice hunter who brought his portfolio of obscene matter to the capital to lobby zealously for the cause of purity.

Comstock put through his law in 1873. Half a century passed before advocates of birth control went before congress seeking revision of the measure. The present hearings are the first renewal of this effort since the lack of success with the Cummins-Vale bill in 1924-25.

Comstock's triumph over congress was not won easily. He labored for nearly a month in the capital before his bill was passed just as President Grant began his second term. Congress was astir over the credit Mobilier scandal. Only in a few quarters could this youth of 29, brimming with indignation at the exhibits he carried under his arm, look for help.

But when Comstock won it was a thorough victory. Not only did his law prohibit the sending through the mails of birth-control information and devices, but it stamped as criminal the mailing of "every obscene . . . filthy book, pamphlet . . . or other publication of an indecent character."

Mrs. Sanger and her associates are interested only in the birth-control provisions, which they hope to repeal by the Gillett bill.

While Comstock devoted most of his time in Washington to missionary work with the law-makers, he found time to criticize the women encountered at the president's reception.

"They were brazen — dressed extremely silly—enameled faces and powdered hair — low dresses — hair most ridiculous and altogether most extremely disgusting to every lover of pure, noble, modest woman," he wrote in his diary.

On one occasion, when the house was held in session beyond midnight Saturday, Comstock remembered the Sabbath day and refused to desecrate it by staying, even though his beloved bill was involved in the session.

Frequently the specter of failure sent him to depths of despair.

"I felt O so crushed, so broken down, so tempted to sin against God," he confided to his diary. "O, I felt almost like distrusting God, doubting and rebellious, and then I went to bed, to pass the night beset by the devil."

Tormented by doubts though he was, Comstock eventually triumphed. "O, how can I express the joy of my soul or speak of the mercy of God," was the diary entry the day Grant signed his bill.

During his lobbying Comstock was the representative of the committee for the suppression of vice, which sent him frequently and enthusiastic encouragement from New York.

Comstock died in 1915 as the result of "over-doing in a purity convention." He was 71 and had been pursuing vice since he raided his first saloon at the age of 18.

None of the great national women's groups will be represented officially at tomorrow's hearing on the bill, which would legalize dissemination of birth-control information and repeal the Comstock law.

Unofficially, leaders of leading women's organizations admit they are "deeply interested in the proposed legislation." Officially, they say their organizations have never taken any action on the subject of birth control.

POLICE ON GUARD AT LYLE'S HOME

CHICAGO, Feb. 12.—(AP)—The home of Judge John H. Lyle, who is one of the candidates opposing Mayor William Hale Thompson for the republican mayoralty nomination, was under a police guard last night.

He found two uniformed policemen in front of his home when he returned from two campaign meetings. They said they did not know who had given the orders for the guard, but the Chicago Herald and Examiner quoted Michael Lee, of the Englewood police, as saying he had taken the action on instructions from John Alcock, acting commissioner of police.

One of the policemen was quoted as saying, "We won't let any one bomb your house." There have been several bombings in Chicago recently. The third and fourth of this week occurred last night.

One of them, placed near the warehouse of the Jackson Storage & Van Co. on the West Side, shattered hundreds of windows, but no one was hurt. The other damaged a fortune telling establishment on the South Side.

CITRUS MARKET TURNS UPWARD

TAMPA, Fla., Feb. 12.—(AP)—The citrus market, unsatisfactory all season, said C. C. Commander, Florida Citrus Exchange general manager, has changed overnight and even speculators in Florida today were paying $1 a box more than previously. He expressed the belief that the northern markets would react more favorably to the small volume available as the season progressed. He attributed the reversal to control of the fruit fly cooperative organizations.

FORMER ATLANTA PASTOR IS DEAD

CINCINNATI, Ohio, Feb. 12.—(AP) The Rev. George W. Argabrite, 70, retired Baptist minister, who for six years did evangelistic work in Kentucky and who occupied pastorates in Atlanta and Madison, Ga.; Fort Thomas, Paris and Smith Grove, Ky., and Cincinnati, died here today at his home.

Buriel will be at Blacksburg, Va., his birthplace.

He retired two years ago, and was a graduate of the Louisville Baptist Seminary. His widow and two sons survive him.

$50,000 MAY BE VOTED TO ENTERTAIN FRENCH

WASHINGTON, Feb. 12.—(AP)—$50,000 appropriation for the entertainment of French World War veterans who will hold their fourteenth annual convention here during celebration of the George Washington bicentennial next year was approved today by the house foreign affairs committee.

The Frenchmen will meet in Washington in September, 1932, the month in which General Lafayette was born.

Assistant Secretary of State Carr advised the house committee that the department "has received no request for an appropriation from French sources," but added he thought the celebration deserved congressional support.

John T. Taylor, legislative representative of the American Legion, said that when the legion went to France two years ago the French government appropriated $154,000 for their entertainment.

Kelvinator Officials Confer With Distributors in Atlanta

George W. Mason (left) and H. W. Burritt, president and vice president of the Kelvinator Corporation, who were here Thursday to confer with their distributors, the Atlanta Sash & Door Company.

George W. Mason, chairman of the board and president, and H. W. Burritt, vice president in charge of sales, of the Kelvinator Corporation, Detroit, and Leonard Refrigerator Company are in Atlanta to confer with officials of the Atlanta Sash & Door Company, local Kelvinator distributors. Mr. Mason and Mr. Burritt are making their annual visit to the distributors and jobbers who handle Kenvinator and Leonard products, making selling plans for 1931 and getting first-hand information concerning conditions as they now exist, and the prospects for the year ahead.

Mr. Mason expressed himself as highly pleased with the conditions which he has found within the Kelvinator organization. "Our distributors and dealers," he says, "are wasting very little time in making comparisons between present conditions and those of other years. Instead they are buckling down to the job of making the most of conditions as they find them."

Mr. Burritt, in happy mood, and thoroughly enjoying his visit to the local distributing organization, whose personnel is well known to him, talked freely and optimistically about his company affairs.

"The year 1930 proved profitable for the electric refrigeration business," he said, "which stood up far better than most others during the past year. According to the latest authentic figures of the industry, 1,002,000 household and commercial electric refrigerators were sold in 1930, a dollar volume of $380,120,000. Of these 770,000 were household models with a dollar volume of $223,320,000. This is tremendous increase in units and dollar volume over 1929. It is estimated that 1,000,000 household electric refrigerators, valued at $286,000,000, and 300,000 commercial refrigerators, electrically refrigerated valued at $189,000,000, a total of 1,300,000 refrigerators, valued at $475,000,000, will be the sales record of 1931.

"There are now 20,438,774 wired homes in the United States. Three million families are using electric refrigerators. The saturation point of the present household market is now figured at 14.7 per cent. As 95 per cent of total electric refrigeration sales have been made within the past five years, replacements will not be a factor for years to come.

"Of all the sales of electric refrigerators that were made in 1930, and since the beginning of the industry, Kelvinator has marketed its share. Its shipments of domestic electric refrigerators in 1930 exceeded by 31 per cent shipments in 1929, which was Kelvinator's peak year. At the present time, despite the season of the year, Kelvinator business is good, and the factory is running on a five-day basis, with a full quota of workers, turning out a considerably greater number of units than at this period in 1930.

Speaking of the financial side of his company's operation, President Mason said, "The Kelvinator Corporation and its subsidiaries showed, for the fiscal year 1930, a net profit of $1,601,015.37, an increase of 31 per cent over 1929, equal to $1.35 per share on the 1,182,136 shares outstanding. This includes dividends declared out of the profits of the Refrigeration Discount Corporation amounting to $160,000 but does not include nearly $60,000, our proportionate share of the earnings of Kelvinator of Canada, Ltd. There were charged against the operations of the fiscal year all tool and die charges and experimental work, involving the expenditure of $463,841.62, in addition to heavy expenses incident to the introduction to the public of the new Yukon line of popular priced Kelvinators, and the new line of Leonard electric refrigerators. The balance sheet shows Kelvinator is strong financial condition, facing the future with everything in its favor.

"As I see it, the greatest sales increase in the electric refrigeration industry will come from the domestic field which is an open one, with less than 15 per cent saturation. We have ample evidence of the public acceptance of electric refrigeration. People fully realize the advantage of food protection and are desirous of having the enjoyments which an electric refrigerator makes possible in the home.

"The National Electric Light Association has sponsored an advertising campaign, in co-operation with the electric refrigeration manufacturers, which will run several years. The goal is to assist in the sale of one million or more household refrigerators in 1931. What with the advertising of the manufacturers themselves and this supplementary advertising help, there is every reason to believe that the goal will be more than reached."

1930 REPORTS MADE BY WELFARE SOCIETY

Record of service in the last year to 4,102 families, with helpfulness to 8,788 adults and 11,793 children in dire need, was presented in reports at the twenty-fifth annual meeting of the Family Welfare Society Thursday afternoon in the Chamber of Commerce auditorium.

The year was reported to have been the busiest and most fruitful in history of the organization. With receipts of $79,836.84 recorded, the financial statement showed more than $70,000 expended for actual service and relief to families. The society is one of the agencies maintained through the Atlanta Community Chest.

A deficit of $6,626.87 for the year, the result of the unusual burden of appeals for help, was reported.

Dr. C. R. Stauffer, pastor of the First Christian church, was nominated as president of the society, succeeding Fred A. Jordan, who was forced by pressure of business to decline re-election. The nomination will be ratified by the executive board of the society, together with those of L. J. Elsas, to be first vice president; James C. Malone, second vice president, and R. A. Magill, treasurer.

Communion Cup Issue Brings Synod Storm

NEWTON, N. C., Feb. 12.—(AP) Despite criticism of individual communion cups as "stylish tomfoolery and ridiculous germphobism," the North Carolina Evangelical Lutheran synod voted today to allow its churches to use the individual cups if they so desire.

The action was taken through approval of a motion, sponsored by the Rev. E. F. Keever, of Wilmington, to rescind a former enactment of synod requiring the use of the common communion cup.

After the motion carried, 86 to 29, the Rev. W. A. Deaton, of Boone, left the church, asking that he be excused from attending future synods, and the Rev. W. J. Boger, of Newton, asserted he, too, might not attend further synodical communions.

BOARD ORDERED TO HEAR APPEAL

An order directing the police pension board to meet within 10 days and pass on the pension application of Dr. John G. Wilkins, city physician, in a manner provided by law, was signed Thursday by Judge R. Earl Camp, of Dublin, who is presiding in Fulton superior court.

Dr. Wilkins was acquitted recently when tried on extortion charges, and impeachment charges were withdrawn by city council. In his petition for mandamus to compel the police pension board to grant him a pension for his 27 years of service to the city, Dr. Wilkins charged that the board had refused to meet and consider his application.

FIGURING FAIR TAXES.

In one issue of a newspaper is contained a list of 79 bills on the subject of taxation now pending in the many state legislatures that are in session. These bills are only the latest crop, as many more have previously been presented and are under committee treatment.

One of the outstanding features of many of the measures is the effort to reduce or abolish property taxes for state purposes. Another is to broaden personal and business income taxes by cutting out unfair exemption of the great mass of citizens who have incomes and should pay proportional taxes upon them. Yet another is imposing a graduated sales tax upon all commercial sales on which profits are made. Still another frequent feature is the endeavor to corral and tax intangibles, even to the point of denying the use of securities as evidence in a court unless they are tax paid.

The Ohio legislature has gone to the root of the tax problem by adopting a resolution providing a committee to draw up a tax legislative program to be reported back to the general assembly in 60 days. The committee will be composed of three senators, three representatives and three to be appointed by the governor, "if he chooses." But Governor White does not choose to be represented, saying:

I take the position, nowever, that the drafting of the bill is entirely in the hands of the members of the general assembly and that the executive department of the state government should not be actively represented on any committe which is preparing legislation.

The committee is directed to consider the needs of the state and—

To prepare and introduce in the house and senate such bills as they may agree upon, to provide for the raising of revenue from or by means of sales taxes, income taxes or taxes on intangibles, or any other form or system which may seem desirable, and which will give to the people of this state an efficient, economic and just system of taxation as defined by the state constitution, and the amendment of 1929.

In order to get at the pressing problem of a tax system that will be workable and equitable, and sufficient for state purposes, the North Carolina general assembly is being moved to ask for a constitutional convention. Like Georgia the North Carolina legislature is constitution-bound and not free to reform out of hand the evils and inequities of an archaic and insufficient system of imposing taxes for the needs and progress of the state.

The wide prevalence of popular demands for recasting state tax systems shows that the subjects and incidences of taxation have radically changed in recent times and none of the progressive states can longer happily and safely rest upon the old basis of ad valorem property taxes.

On close analysis of the Georgia situation there is really no need of a constitutional convention or amendment to get rid of any burden imposed by the ad valorem property tax. The general assembly has complete authority to reduce the rate to one-twentieth of a mill and substitute for the present 5 mill tax other and easier and more productive levies.

Some day the awakened burden bearers of Georgia will organize in a way to enforce a tax system that will make every citizen of the commonwealth pay his due and honest share of the expenses of the government that protects and benefits him or her.

Drunken policemen are hardly the fellows to send out to arrest drunken motor drivers and bootleggers.

President Hoover seems eager to get rid of congress "at any price"—to the people.

Bishop Ainsworth should think what a queer "grand jury" that would be that allowed the accused to come in and argue his case for several hours after cross-examining its witnesses.

Business will not discard its gas-masks and bullet-proof vests until congress adjourns on March 4 for the summer.

CHASE OUT THE DRUNKS.

Chief Beavers is 100 per cent right when he says that policemen who habitually drink liquor and are often drunk should not be kept upon the force for any reason whatsoever. The presence of such untrustworthy, unsafe men among the protective guardians of city life, property and good order is simply intolerable.

The people demand that men who operate railway trains on which they ride shall be men free from liquor derangement. They demand that drunken drivers of motor vehicles shall be taken off the streets and severely penalized. How much more necessary is it to the public security that men appointed to police the city should be always sober and reliable.

Chief Beavers has the long-standing repute of sobriety, honesty and courage. The people of the city trust his wisdom and discretion implicitly, and they expect him to identify the drunkard policemen and pitilessly expose them until their ward political backers will no longer dare to protect them in their dangerous functions.

We may not be able to catch all the bootleggers, gamblers, holdup men and burglars that afflict the city, but everybody knows that we can fire ruthlessly drunken policemen and maintain a sober, if not wholly effective, force of public protectors. So the popular call to Chief Beavers is to demand the head of every drunkard in his department.

FIELD AND FACTORY.

That was a sharply-accented and illuminating debate on Wednesday evening at the Institute of Citizenship now in session at Emory University. The subject was whether the south should return to its dependence upon agricultural pursuits and products for its modes of life and hopes of prosperity, or follow the trend of modern civilization by industrial development and use of its natural resources for wealth.

There is no question of the need of the southern people to promote to the fullest their agricultural interests. Our extent of rural territories, our climate, our adaptability to farming, dairying, husbandry, forestry and truck-raising, are inducements to a high state of profitable agriculture. These things negative any suggestion that the south will abandon agrarianism in either principal or practice.

But industrialism has already come to the south and will more and more become the twin sister of agriculture. Both are industries that make for the independence, self-sustenance and prosperity of a people as endowed as we are by the gifts of Providence and the servants of science.

Agricultural products invite manufacturers and the making of the goods of the mill, factory and foundry must daily rely upon and draw from the farms, pastures and orchards, either near by or far off. So why debate? The right policy is to associate and co-ordinate the two great interests of occupation and vocation.

Many of his party leaders are trying to squeeze President Hoover into shouting "Never again!" Then they will throw dice for his robe of office.

Chairman Raskob will now give his democratic critics the chance to chip in and pay the party's debts. Back a little, gentlemen; don't crowd!

The cock-eyed look at the stock market and say again "What goes up must come down," and that is something to remember.

When Senator Blaine took Postmaster General Brown in hand he found he had picked up a bumblebee instead of a June bug.

The soup-house senators at Washington seem to be in a ruling position. They say "what's the constitution among hungry people?"

Chaplin refuses to go on the radio and is wise. His stunts could only go over via television.

Borah is afraid that Secretary Hyde would play hide-and-seek with the drouth relief funds.

The lash will not come back in Georgia as long as we have the constitution and the supreme court.

Daisy Deboe will probably be as useful to the world while 18 months in jail as she would be out of there.

Those Michigan University students seem to have been full members of the Kappa Hooch fraternity.

THE WORLD'S WINDOW

Poetic Politics.

A unique incident in the history of the Swedish parliament occurred recently, we learn from dispatches, when Mr. Ture Nerman, a well-known young poet, and one of the few communists in the riksdag, delivered his maiden speech in elegant hexameters, but spoke them with such ease and naturalness that only few of his hearers realized that he was speaking in verse. Next day, however, several papers printed this communistic declaration of rights in full, and readers realized that the speech was a regular poem.

As a communist declaration the speech was rather mild; one would prefer to call it a declaration of humanitarian principles, says the London Post. The paper of his own party took care not to mention that the poet rather than the politician had spoken, and that it could be read as hexameters, which might have aroused the wrath of his followers, since Mr. Nerman had spoken according to fixed poetic rules and not in "free verse." Next day some of the papers examined other speeches by prominent party politicians and the strange fact appeared that several of the speakers had unconsciously spoken in "poetry" instead of in prose.

Thus, for instance, a farmer had used blank verse in his peroration, another M. P. had found the Finnish Kalevala meter come natural. The reason must be, as one paper suggested, that Swedish as a language is very rhythmical and musical, nearly all nouns and verbs being bisyllabic.

Pantless Painting.

The salon of the Independent Artists which has opened for the spring showing has furnished Paris with its usual scandal. A pantless painting thought to ridicule an immortal of the French Academy was ordered removed by the police censor on the opening day. The next day it was ordered rehung in its place, as its creator, Anne Marie Carrer, solemnly affirmed that she had not had any particular member of the academy in mind when she did the work. The picture, entitled "Second Childhood," presents a side view of a funny-looking gentleman with a fringe of whiskers, an academician's hat, coat and sword, wearing nothing below the waist to conceal his pygal rotundity and his hairy legs save the floating tails of his braided jacket, which are none too ample.

The worst feature of the figure, according to the police, is that it resembles—in the face—a certain, real live member of the academy, who should be protected from such ignoble caricature. Mlle. Carrer, the artist, thinks the police are all wrong. She did not mean to shock anybody, she said. Least of all did she want her picture to look like a real academician. Her only idea was to satirize man's love for decoration, and hasn't an artist the right to satirize? Latest information is to the effect that the painting was taken down once more by the police.

Health Talks

BY DR. WILLIAM BRADY.

CHILDREN WITH ENLARGED TONSILS AND ADENOIDS.

Before I ever hung out my shingle I armed myself with what I believed the indispensable tools of my trade. Among them was one called a tonsilotome, an ingenious gadget having a ring frame in three sizes to fit office, household and hospital size tonsils, and a little two-pronged spear to impale the quarry and finally a guillotine blade which one shoves home when the tonsil is well engaged in the ring. One fine feature of this method of dealing with tonsils was its simplicity and ease of application. You just jollied the patient into the chair and applied a bit of local anesthetic or put him under ether and inserted the gadget and went sniggersnack, and it was all over. Strange to say this crude treatment proved perfectly satisfactory in a considerable share of cases, perhaps a majority. There are thousands of people walking the earth today who owe their release from annual attacks of quinsy to the old Spanish custom. There are other thousands who have recovered from or escaped disabling arthritis and other serious focal infections, thanks to the same old custom. For amputating the hypertrophied tonsils of children the guillotine is still the method of choice, in my judgment.

Since the guillotine instrument was introduced the throat surgeons have developed a modification of the method. Instead of engaging the tonsil in the ring and slicing it off with a quick yank of the guillotine blade, they prefer to use a wire snare and cut the tonsil off by constricting it with the fine wire. In this way perhaps a greater part of the tonsil is removed and there is less bleeding.

For some time the throat surgeons prated of the importance of removing every little bit of tonsil tissue, and all that, but this was 98 per cent talk. Rarely does the best of specialists remove the tonsil entirely. Rarely is it necessary or even desirable to attempt to do so.

There is no sound reason to regard tonsil tissue as inimical to health, unless the tonsil is infected, harbors germs capable of causing some serious systemic disease. When the tonsil is infected it is rarely infected through and through; the infected area or areas are, as a rule, readily distinguishable from the normal tonsil tissue, on examination by the physician or the pathologist. Our proper purpose is to remove or sterilize the infected portion. That is precisely why the old Spanish custom often did give a satisfactory result, even though it always left more or less tonsil tissue in the throat. That is why the snare method so much used by throat specialists now gives satisfaction in many cases. And that is why the modern method, diathermy (electro-coagulation, electro-desiecation) is giving satisfaction in so many cases.

Candidly I have no definite idea about the purpose or function of the tonsils in childhood, or of the pharyngeal tonsil (the mass of tissue in the vault behind the soft palate called "adenoids" when enlarged), but it seems reasonable to think this tissue serves some good purpose in childhood. From its character and its structure as seen under the miscroscope, we assume this peculiar type of tissue is concerned somehow in protecting the body against the invasion of disease germs, but only in childhood. The tonsils normally undergo evolution and atrophy or shrinkage in early adult life.

MARYLAND SWEARS IN WOODCOCK SUCCESSOR

BALTIMORE, Md., Feb. 12.—(AP) Simon E. Sobeloff, former deputy city solicitor, was sworn in today as United States district attorney for Maryland. He succeeds Amos W. Woodcock, appointed national prohibition director last year.

LOOKING AND LISTENING

BY SAM W. SMALL.

American Problems Yet Unsettled That Must Be Definitely Settled.

One of the surest things you know is that the people of the United States have got to fight the prohibition problem all over again.

We fondly thought we had, after "many trials and great tribulations," mashed the head of the serpent of the still by the enactment of the 18th amendent. We retained our childhood notion that when its tail ceased to wiggle at sundown it would be plumb dead for all time.

But the infernal reptile turns out to have more heads than the hydra of Hercules and all of them are alive and active with the exception of the one that carried the open saloon mouth.

So now we have a bigger job of snake killing ahead of us than we have ever had.

* * * *

Another Big Thing to Settle.

President Hoover has signed the Wagner act to provide a plan and funds for ameliorating the condition of workers in seasons of widespread unemployment.

The idea is to hold in reserve schemes of public work, not immediately urgent, and start them into construction when unemployment becomes prevalent and pauperizing.

It is, in proper theory, the business of the big businesses of the nation to care for their workers in such emergencies. But they will not do that voluntarily and there is no constitutional way to force them to do it.

After that, it should be the function of the states each to care for its own unemployed but it is manifestly impossible to concert them to that end.

So the last resort is the plan to have the general government make work for the unemployed and pay the bill out of federal taxes.

* * * *

The Aged Must be Cared for.

The states, however, are waking up to the necessity of making provision for proper care of dependent aged persons.

New York is preparing for the operation of her old age pension law, which will adequately care for all persons over 70 years of age who are dependent upon public support.

In a dozen legislatures now in session, old age pension bills are under consideration. They are realizing that it is more humane and economical to pay old age pensions than to maintain large homes, asylums, alms-houses and the like and pen the helpless old people in them subject to the doubtful care of paid hirelings.

Sooner or later all the states will doubtless come to this old age pension system which has many virtues and humanitarian values to commend it.

* * * *

The Mountainous Veteran Pensions.

Few persons realize the fact stated by General Gregory in his address on Tuesday evening—that the federal treasury is still paying pensions monthly on account of the war of 1812 with Great Britain!

The old pension roll totals about $220,000,000 a year and the payments already made on account of the World War amount to over $5,500,000,000.

It is estimated that 100 years from now, with no more wars in the meantime, we will still be paying war pensions and our total bill will have gone over a hundred billion dollars, or more than 30 per cent of the present total wealth of the people of the nation.

But we are pledged to that policy and must provide for those payments. We had our wars and we must pay the men, and their dependents, who fought those wars and won them for us.

* * * *

Another Expensive Commitment.

Now our congressmen have embarked the nation upon a policy of farm relief that will soon have the bulk of the people groaning worse than the Hebrew children in the mud-flat brickyards of Egypt.

Hereafter, if we are to endorse what congress is doing, we must fly to the relief of those farmers who, from storm, drouth, tornado, flood, or insect forays, fail to make a crop, or to sell one at profitable prices.

In other words, the farmers of the country are to become conditional pensioners upon the national treasury.

It is a most dangerous system to be foisted upon the people. In other ages and countries it has provoked revolutions and wrecked governments. It can only bring immense troubles and possible disaster to the American people.

* * * *

Changing the American System.

All men and women of sound historical and political information view with dread these approaches to government paternalism, the next step, beyond which is Marxian communism.

But politicians must be served and demagogues must be given their bacon to "tote home" to their begging constituents.

Unless, however, the spirit of the native American people has degenerated from that of their fathers and they are now dumb and degraded enough, on the one hand to accept government doles, and on the other hand to sweat blood and pay them, there will come a revolt against this new system of promoting political fortunes by raids upon the pockets of the people.

The Sooner You Quit Believing in Santa Claus, the Sooner You Learn To Solve Your Own Problems

—By Robert Quillen—

Every individual who has wit enough to be interested in the affairs of his country now has an opportunity to learn something that will be worth while in years to come.

It concerns the ancient law of supply and demand and the ever-popular panacea for economic ills called "price fixing."

Year after year and generation after generation, people work hard to produce something that doesn't sell as they think it should. Failure to get rich makes them resentful and suspicious. And because they don't understand economic laws and have great faith in the laws made by men, they are easily tricked by the visionary who suggests price fixing as a cure for their troubles.

"Let the government fix the selling price of our product instead of leaving it to chance," they say, "and then we'll always know where we stand. Nobody will be hurt, for the price will be fair, and we can work without anxiety, certain of a fair reward."

It is a beautiful dream, but it never can be more than that.

The only successful price fixing ever known is that in the diamond business, and it is possible only because one concern controls production and is virtually free of competition.

It can't work in any other field for the simple reason that a fixed price, which removes the element of chance and guarantees a profit, encourages the production of more than the world will consume and thus throws on the market a surplus that is offered at any price it will bring.

The financial power of England couldn't fix the price of rubber. The effort served only to raise the price for a time and thus encourage the planting of vast new rubber plantations.

Brazil is fast bankrupting itself in an effort to fix the price of coffee—borrowing millions to hold off the market vast stores that increase yearly and must some day be sold. Lacking a miracle, the day of reckoning will bring ruin.

The United States government, eager to pacify ruined farmers, has disregarded both economic law and the experience of other nations and made an effort to fix the price of wheat.

It has bought some 100 million bushels, but the great holding still remains a part of the visible supply and so affects the market still.

France, for the first time in her life, has grown enough wheat for herself; Italy has grown more than ever before; the Argentine has double her average crop; Russia is exporting millions of bushels. The world is glutted with wheat.

And with other nations willing to sell at any price they can get, which is called the "world price," not all the power of the United States government can keep the price above its natural level.

You can't get rich raising hogs when nobody wants pork.

HOLLYWOOD IN PERSON

BY MOLLIE MERRICK.

HOLLYWOOD, Cal., Feb. 12.—(NANA)—The local diet demon is getting credit for still another victim. Current stories tell of the strenuous starvation regime which preceded the collapse of Louis Wolheim.

Forty pounds off is quite a jolt to the system. But it's nothing for a Hollywood star if a tempting role beckons and there is necessity for increased slimness.

Women of this colony have written a tragic history in the annals of slimness. One beauty after another has gone down under the strain of the fight. Lila Lee, most recent of the victims, is not back in the ranks yet.

Joseph Farnham, famous scenarist, has been laid up for six weeks following overstrain of work, athletics, diet and Hollywood life in general. We work under terrific pressure here. There is necessity for speed in the studios, there is necessity for contacts outside the lot. Everyone holds up a cup of good cheer and it is just too awful to throw a heavy shadow—it just isn't done in our best cinema circles.

And now Louis Wolheim, who wanted the role of the managing editor in The Front Page and was told he might have it—at a certain weight—who got down to the weight, got the flu and then got a warning from his doctor that if he played it, it might be his last role—goes on the retirement list for the present.

Those who know say Joan Crawford is approaching the danger line of slimness. Joan Crawford is one of the best bets in the cinema industry, one of the greatest box office attractions in pictures, one of the most interesting personalities and a girl with a sufficiently lovely figure when she is 20 pounds heavier, to still top most of the Hollywood slim ones.

Sam Goldwyn star solves a good many Hollywood questions by a Chicago interview, in which she announced that she will maintain her own residence in the cinema village although she and Jack Gilbert will be on the best of terms.

Thus Claire explains her attitude on the grounds that "I would rather be my husband's mistress than his housewife."

Good copy. From the brightest girl who ever came into Hollywood to beat the movie game. And fought the battle in her own way. And has won, too!

Jack Gilbert hasn't been such great shakes as a world idol for the women of late. But at that he seems to have done better before the cameras than in the role of husband.

He has been frequently quoted as having voiced his sentiments on marriage during the days preceding Ina Claire's departure from here and during her stay in New York. Not official announcements—for Jack Gilbert has ceased being interviewed by the world's press. He has gone into the great silence. But unofficially at those Hollywood parties when fun runs high and conversation often goes in the opposite direction.

That marriage is the bunk—or sentiments to that effect—has been the burden of Jack Gilbert's commentary. So Ina Claire's interview, interesting and enlightening as it is intended to be, doesn't really solve the situation at all.

The name Ina Claire means far more in Hollywood this morning than the name Jack Gilbert. And that's pretty good satisfaction to one blonde and beautiful lady who was known as Mrs. Jack Gilbert hereabouts and of whom many a producer asked in the early half of last year: "Who's Ina Claire?"

HYDE SAYS RELIEF LOANS AVAILABLE TO PROVIDE FOOD

dent Curtis had brought Senator Glass, democrat, Virginia, into action against Democratic Leader Robinson.

Robinson took the floor for the first time since his opening address in defense of the compromise to oppose vigorously a motion by Senator Wheeler, democrat, Montana, to lay aside the agreement.

Protests Delay.

He protested against delay and asserted that if debate persisted in attacks upon President Hoover and Secretary Hyde at the expense of action on the compromise that the charge of "inefficiency" could be leveled against congress.

With equal vigor and heat, Glass replied that he objected to being reproached now for pursuing a program originally proposed by Robinson himself.

For more than an hour these two democratic warriors took turn about in leveling pointed shafts at each other with Wheeler joining the Virginian in heckling Robinson.

"I hope my friends will not put me in the position of a complete failure to afford relief because the full measure of relief cannot be obtained," said Robinson.

"If this compromise proposal is not carried into effect I see the pitiful spectacle of three months expended and nothing done. On the other hand, if it is carried I see congress reaching a conclusion which will be effective, helpful and advantageous.

"If the proposal is rejected, even if we had an extraordinary session, there is no assurance that we could pass over the executive's veto a measure which he states is distasteful to him."

Senator Heflin, democrat, Alabama, made it clear to the senate today that he would support the agreement.

RED CROSS SOUNDS NEW RELIEF APPEAL

WASHINGTON, Feb. 12.—(AP)—Word pictures of the need behind the Red Cross appeal for a $10,000,000 drouth relief fund went by radio tonight from the south, the east and the nation's capital.

Governor Harvey Parnell, of Arkansas, the state hardest hit; Governor Norman S. Case, of Rhode Island, and Judge John Barton Payne, Red Cross chairman, participated in a special program urging the raising of $2,500,000 necessary to complete the fund.

Their addresses went over the National Broadcasting Company System which was paid for its service by the General Foods Corporation.

Judge Payne from Washington, said the money already received "is now being spent and enables the Red Cross to carry on."

"Two and a half millions more will complete the fund," he added. "This will enable the Red Cross to care for the sufferers until the barren farms come into production."

Payne said the work of his organization had been "well done."

Governor Parnell speaking from the executive mansion at Little Rock, said his state would not admit permanent defeat "but we need and must have temporary help and we must have it speedily."

"Imagine," he said, "what your own plight would be if your income for a year were wiped out, your savings were put beyond your reach and your friends, neighbors and relatives to whom you turned for help, were in similar straits. That is the plight of a million people in the drouth-stricken states today."

The Rhode Island governor, speaking from Providence, said that on behalf of the east, he had sent assurances to the Arkansas governor that "every penny of the amount requested by the American Red Cross to carry on relief work will be raised forthwith."

LIBERTY PERILED BY FEDERAL POWER

he said, "Lincoln watched the construction of the Washington monument and even the very chairs in which he sat while meditating upon his problems were grouped about the room.

"Lincoln," President Hoover said, "was a builder in an epoch of destruction. It was his assignment by Providence to restore the national edifice so badly shattered in its social and economic structure that it had well-nigh failed."

Problems Survive.

He added that some of the present-day problems were equally vivid in Lincoln's day.

"You will find Lincoln addressing the country in strong and urgent support of the protective tariff with vivid declamation against the party opposing that policy. You will find him advocating federal government aid in internal development of waterways, rivers and harbors, and transportation. You will find him pounding at the public mind against nullification and for adherence to constitutional processes of government.

"No stronger statement has ever been made than that of Lincoln upon obedience to law as the very foundation of our republic."

In closing, President Hoover touched again on the business depression, declaring that "victory over this depression and over our other difficulties will be won by the resolution of our people to fight their own battles in their own communities, by stimulating their ingenuity to solve their own problems, by taking new courage to be masters of their own destinies in the struggle of life. This is not the easy way, but it is the American way. And it was Lincoln's way."

ParkCalls on YoungGeorgians To Put State on Its Feet

Macon Man Makes Stirring Appeal in Speech at Emory's Institute of Citizenship Thursday Night

An appeal to the young men of the state "to lift Georgia out of the slough of despond, where it rests on the bottom in government affairs, to its former high position as the Empire State of the South" was the keynote of the speech made at the annual institute of citizenship at Emory University Tuesday night by Orville A. Park, of Macon.

"Georgia's governmental system is organized on the basis of inefficiency," declared Mr. Park, who as one of the outstanding lawyers of the state is the author of Park's code and other legal and banking works. "It is the embodiment of local self-government gone to seed, of democracy run riot. There are more than twice too many counties, and practically no central executive authority."

Mr. Park's speech marked one of the high spots of a four-day program that has drawn internationally known statesmen and jurists to the Emory campus. The institute ends Friday night.

Mr. Park asserted that in recent years Georgia has gone to the very bottom among the states of the Union in expenditure for education, charities, public health and government. He showed by a series of charts how Georgia ranks forty-eighth in each of these four things.

Then he called for a sweeping government reform, in order to remedy these evils and "make Georgia again what she used to be."

He asked his audience to consider that everything he said was for the good of the state, and not regard it as slander.

"I am not slandering," he said. "I love the state of Georgia as much as any man, and I wouldn't hurt it for anything. The trouble is that the people of Georgia have been unwilling to face facts. We have been flattering ourselves that Georgia is the Empire State of the South, and that 'it's great to be a Georgian.' The truth is that the state has gone to seed under our very noses.

Urges New Constitution.

"The first thing that Georgia has to do," declared Mr. Park emphatically, "is to adopt a new constitution. Not simply revise the present one, but throw it away and get a new one. The present constitution was framed for a different age. It was written with a very different spirit from the twentieth century. It was born in the reconstruction era, and is utterly unsuited to our present needs. Its purpose was to limit all government to the last degree. It was framed in suspicion and distrust. The idea was to hold all government to the smallest possible compass.

"What we must do is remodel our government to give Georgia a real executive head instead of a mere figurehead. We must vote for one man who shall have certain powers, and not for 40 or 50 men of vague or unknown duties. Oh, let us get away from the silly idea that the people have to elect anybody. That's not democracy. When we want a geologist, a tax expert, or an agricultural expert let's appoint them through our executive power instead of electing politicians who know little or nothing about the jobs.

Likens Legislature to Mob.

"We must also remodel our legislature," Mr. Park continued. "We can't do anything with a mob. We must have a law-making body. The present legislature is too big. Senate must be differently constituted. At present the senate does not represent a thing. Some permanency must be given to the legislature, so that it will not change so constantly. And we must make our representation fair. At present it is grossly unfair and unjust. The sparsely populated counties should not have as big a voting power as the larger and more densely populated ones.

"The system of collecting revenues in Georgia is so absurdly complicated and ineffectual that no corporation or bank in the country would consider it. Tax reform is one of the important things we must accomplish under a new constitution.

Too Many Counties in Georgia.

"And, what is most important is to reduce the number of our counties and cut down the tremendous waste that the present system causes." The speaker showed how Georgia, with its 161 counties, is second only to Texas in the United States in total number, and pointed out that, measured by area of population, Georgia has three times the average number of counties for all states. He stated that there are 113 counties in the state which have not enough taxable wealth to maintain county government, and that it takes about 25,000 paid officials for our county government. At least half of this expense could be saved by consolidation, he said.

"Under the present constitution of Georgia," Mr. Park asserted, "it is the marvel of the age that the Georgia legislature does anything half as well as it does."

Value of Education.

The Macon attorney laid special emphasis on the value of education. After showing that Georgia now spends less per capita for education than any other state in the country, he said that the underlying cause of Georgia's condition today is on account of this very thing. "Georgia stands at the bottom of all the states because she has neglected her childhood," he declared.

One jolt which Georgia received last year, said the speaker, was the census return, showing that Georgia's increase in population was less than any other state except Montana, which showed a decrease. He answered the argument of negro exodus from the state by showing how South Carolina, Mississippi, and other southern states had the same negro exodus and yet showed substantial gains in population.

Mr. Park attributed Georgia's poor showing in population increase to the fact that "our poor rating in governmental affairs is not such as to attract immigrants, but has been such as to drive many people out.

Not Slandering Georgia.

"Tomorrow," the speaker said, "someone will say I slandered Georgia by talk of this sort. I am not slandering the state, and I believe from the bottom of my heart that these things must be known before we can again take our rightful high position. We have not looked at this thing open-mindedly. We have preferred to grovel in the dirt rather than arouse ourselves to the reforms that are needed.

"To those who frown on this kind of speech because they say it is 'poor advertising' and harmful to the state, I should like to say that these deplorable facts are known all over the United States better than in Georgia.

"Rotten Tax System."

"We are losing our intelligent people, driving out wealth on account of our rotten tax system; we are not attracting industry as we ought. If you think industry is coming here as it ought, consider that Alabama and other surrounding states are getting many more mills and enterprises than we.

"Our greatest lack is a new thinking on the part of the people of Georgia, a new spirit. This is needed to put the state ahead. We have been thinking only of our own front yards. Georgia has been in a fetish of 'democracy.' It has ruined us. The state is bigger than all the 161 counties put together, and the people must realize it before Georgia can come out of the rut."

Program for Friday.

SENATE IS READY FOR HOT BATTLE ON RENTALS BILL

and adopting the Edwards resolution limiting state jobs one to a person, the ways and means committee in the afternoon session considered the Huddleston bill to levy a new schedule of taxes on motor carriers.

The senate morning hour was spent in discussing another motor carrier measure designed to regulate operation over the highways, adjourning after discussing a series of minor amendments offered during the progress of considering the first third of the committee substitute to the original Myrick bill.

Bowers Invited.

Claude G. Bowers, editor of the New York Evening World and keynoter at the last democratic national convention, was invited, by a joint resolution adopted in the house and sent over to the senate, to address a joint session of the legislature on February 20. Mr. Bowers will be in Atlanta at that time to address the press institute at Emory.

The Battle-Allen rental bill, under a special order of the house adopted immediately after it had passed final reading by a vote of 146 to 50, reached the senate shortly after 10 o'clock but was not immediately referred to a committee because the senate, at the time the measure came over by special messenger, was proceeding with its unfinished business of the day before.

With short sessions scheduled in both houses today, indications Thursday night were that, while adjournment would be only until Monday, that a full membership of the senate finance committee would be unlikely before Tuesday. For the reason also that the house feared a slim attendance Monday, further debate on the resolution to authorize the purchase of a state farm was deferred until Tuesday when the measure was made a special and continuing order.

Under the terms of the substitute to the original bill, first introduced by Representative Boyd Sloan, of Hall county, the committee resolution would name a committee of three senators and five members of the house and authorize it to negotiate for the purchase of from 5,000 to 30,000 acres of land. An appropriation of $200,000 for this purpose is included in the resolution, the money to be paid out of the treasury when available.

Whaley Bill Opposed.

The senate education committee reported unfavorably the Whaley bill which would change the constitution to provide that the $600 now being paid annually to each county superintendent of schools, out of the general treasury, be paid in the future by the counties.

Apart from the regular order of business in the house Thursday was the adoption of a resolution extending to Miss Georgia Brown, the daughter of Dr. George Brown, a member of the Fulton delegation, the privileges of the floor. Miss Brown was named for the state when her father was a member of the house in which only two members of the present assembly served, Representatives Hooper Alexander, of DeKalb, and J. E. Lord, of Jackson.

A delegation of Atlanta women, representing the Atlanta Woman's Club and other organizations, conferred in the senate with President W. Cecil Neill to register opposition to the passage of the King bill restoring the use of the lash as a means of disciplining convicts in Georgia.

Bus Taxes Approved.

The house ways and means committee late Thursday gave unanimous approval to the bill providing a new schedule of taxes on motor buses and trucks. This measure was drafted by a sub-committee headed by Representative Huddleston, of Meriwether, which has been studying various bills along the same lines for the past two weeks.

Unlike the bus bills now under consideration in the senate, this bill is not of regulatory nature. Its principal features are two separate tax schedules, one fixing a flat annual rate based on weight, capacity and the length of the route over which the vehicle operates, and the other a graduated scale based on mileage. Both interstate and intrastate carriers are given the option of paying whichever of these two they may prefer. The bill also differentiates between common and private carriers in accordance with a recent decision of the United States supreme court.

The ways and means committee also set 9 o'clock this morning as the hour for a public hearing on another sub-committee bill designed to strengthen the cigar and cigaret tax act. The measure at present contains no tax rates, as the sub-committee desired to leave any possible rate changes to the discretion of the full committee after hearing arguments by tobacco dealers.

HEROIC DEED SITE TO BECOME PARK

Hart. She grabbed one of their guns and cocked it. With a "blazing oath," one history says, she told them she would shoot the first man to rise or to taste food. She sent a son to the whigs to say she had captured "six d—— tories," who were shortly thereafter taken into custody by the menfolks.

Plans for construction and management of the park are to be drawn by Charles Elliott, of the Georgia forest service. The plans will include forest management, such as thinning, planting and maintenance, as well as construction of roads and trails, location of buildings and markers, Miss Wright said.

The tract was visited today by committees from the two chapters, including Mrs. Y. H. Yarborough, regent of the Nancy Hart chapter; Miss Wright, Mrs. T. O. Tabor, Jr., state chairman of conservation and thrift; Mr. Elliott and Mr. Downer, local land owner.

Hart county near-by is said to be the only county in Georgia, and one of few in the country, to have been named for a woman.

CUNNINGHAM HEADS HISTORICAL SOCIETY

Annual Prize on Georgia History Won by Miss Amanda Johnson.

SAVANNAH, Ga., Feb. 12.—(AP)—The ninety-second annual gathering of the Georgia Historical Society here Thursday was marked by the election of a new president and the awarding of the annual prize for the best article on Georgia history to Miss Amanda Johnson, of Milledgeville.

The board of curators named T. Maychew Cunningham president, succeeding W. W. Gordon, who becomes a vice president.

Miss Johnson, who has previously competed in several contests of the society, won her first award today. Professor John D. Ward, of Vanderbilt University, decided her article: "A State in the Making—Georgia (1783-1798)" was the best submitted.

The other officers of the society were all re-elected, including: Otis Ashmore, Savannah; Lawton B. Evans, Augusta, and Leonard L. Mackall, Savannah, vice presidents; Charles F. Groves, Savannah, secretary-treasurer; William Hardin, Savannah, librarian and corresponding secretary, and E. M. Coulter, Athens, editor Georgia Historical Quarterly.

The curators with terms expiring Thursday who were re-elected were: Otis Ashmore, E. M. Coulter, Leonard L. Mackall, Miss Ola H. Wyeth and Mrs. Gordon Saussy. Dr. Charles H. Herty, New York, and Charlton M. Theus, of Savannah, were elected curators.

Mackall Speaks.

Mr. Mackall gave two interesting addresses, one on the new catalog of the DeRenne library and the second on the two visits to Savannah of William Makepeace Thackeray in 1853 and 1856.

The catalog to be issued within a few weeks will be limited to 300 numbered copies, containing 1,300 pages with 160 illustrations and 3 photogravure frontispieces.

Copies of the catalog are to be presented to the Historical Society, Georgia state library, University of Georgia, Mercer University, Emory University and a limited number of other institutions.

In his report Mr. Mackall said, in part:

"As already explained in my elaborate paper read before the society in May, 1918, the wonderful library at Wormsloe unquestionably outclasses all other existing collections on Georgia history and literature up to 1918.

"It contains the only quite complete and authentic set of the regular series of Georgia laws, 1799 to 1918, and many previous acts which are unique.

Notable Collection.

"The Confederate collection is also very notable, and includes the original manuscript with all the signatures of the permanent constitution of the Confederate states.

"The DeRenne library is the result of 25 years of intelligent and persistent collecting by our late member, W. J. DeRenne, who died June 23, 1916, aged not quite 63 years. He was a very strong and striking personality and those who really knew him still miss him very much.

"At the urgent request of Mr. DeRenne the preparation of the new catalog was begun just 15 years ago under bibliographical supervision and the work in preliminary form was finished in July, 1918. But the World War and many other unexpected complications have delayed the preparation of the copy for the press and the printing for a longer time than intended. . . .

"No catalog has ever been perfect and none will ever really be so, but the new catalog of the DeRenne collection will at least serve as a partial key to a great collection which can never be superseded or even duplicated and will always remain indispensable to serious students of Georgia's past."

WAKE UP YOUR LIVER BILE— WITHOUT CALOMEL

And You'll Jump Out of Bed in the Morning Rarin' to Go

If you feel sour and sunk and the world looks punk, don't swallow a lot of salts, mineral water, oil, laxative candy or chewing gum and expect them to make you suddenly sweet and buoyant and full of sunshine.

For they can't do it. They only move the bowels and a mere movement doesn't get at the cause. The reason for your down-and-out feeling is your liver. It should pour out two pounds of liquid bile into your bowels daily.

If this bile is not flowing freely, your food doesn't digest. It just decays in the bowels. Gas bloats up your stomach. You have a thick, bad taste and your breath is foul, skin often breaks out in blemishes. Your head aches and you feel down and out. Your whole system is poisoned.

It takes those good, old CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS to get these two pounds of bile flowing freely and make you feel "up and up." They contain wonderful, harmless, gentle vegetable extracts, amazing when it comes to making the bile flow freely.

But don't ask for liver pills. Ask for Carter's Little Liver Pills. Look for the name Carter's Little Liver Pills on the red label. Resent a substitute.

COLUMBUS MOURNS DEATH OF MRS. SWIFT

Funeral Services Conducted Thursday From Home in Wynnton.

COLUMBUS, Ga., Feb. 12.—The funeral of Mrs. Edward W. Swift, Sr., prominent and beloved Columbus woman, whose death Wednesday cast a shadow over the entire city, was held Thursday afternoon from her late residence on the Buena Vista road in Wynnton. Illges, Lloyd G. Bowers, Barschall Andrews, Marshall Welborn, Sr., Charles M. Woolfolk, Jr., and James Fletcher.

She is survived by her husband, Edward W. Swift, Sr.; two sons, Edward W. Swift, Jr., and William Daniel Swift; a daughter-in-law, Mrs. Edward W. Swift, Jr., and a brother, William T. Williams.

As Miss Alma Williams she was one of the city's most popular and beloved young women and her life has gained in beauty and sweetness as the years passed by.

Arrest Follows Chicks' Invasion of Cemetery

MACON, Ga., Feb. 12.—(AP)—The ability of Officer Pat Lord to pick out and follow individual chicken tracks caused Will Thomas, Pleasant Hill negro, to be haled into police court today on a charge of violating a city ordinance by allowing his chickens to run at large in Riverside cemetery.

Action on orders from Police Chief Ben T. Watkins, who had received numerous complaints that chickens were scratching up flower beds and making nests among the graves in the cemetery, Officer Lord set out Wednesday to solve the matter.

He told Recorder M. Felton Hatcher that after discovering a flower bed freshly scratched up by chickens, he made a special study of the tracks, and then followed them to Thomas' home five blocks away. There he identified the marauders by the peculiarities of a rooster's claws, two of which had been torn off in a steel trap.

Thomas claimed the chickens in police court and was fined $2.50 when he promised to keep them at home in the future.

Tree Planting at Sea Island Beach Honors Georgia's First Governor

The 198th anniversary of the founding of the colony of Georgia by General James Edward Oglethorpe was celebrated at Sea Island Beach, Georgia, on February 11, with ceremonies which included the planting there of a tree from the former estate of General Oglethorpe in England, Rodsal Manor. England was represented at the ceremonies by officers and men from H.M.S. Heliotrope. PYTHIANS OF GEORGIA PLAN REORGANIZATION

MACON, Ga., Feb. 12.—(AP)—Plans for reorganization of Georgia Pythian lodges into districts progressed at the meeting of the advisory board of the grand lodge of Georgia, held at the Dempsey hotel Thursday morning. The future of the work in the state seems better, and progress more assured, according to Leon C. Greer, of Atlanta, grand chancellor.

During the morning plans for the annual one-day convention, which will be held in Waycross May 19, were made.

General Robert Wood Experiments In Cattle and Hog-Raising on Farm

AUGUSTA, Ga., Feb. 12.—(AP)—Raising of cattle and hogs as a means of making farm lands pay dividends has been undertaken by General Robert E. Wood, president of Sears, Roebuck and Company, on a tract in Columbia county.

General Wood, here on a business trip, says he is hopeful that he may succeed in the "experiment with the hogs and cattle, even if it is being conducted at long range. For certainly," he said, "we are favored by a marvelous all-year-round climate in this section."

He said he had not yet made any profit on the enterprise, although he felt the experiment was not quite fair, inasmuch as he has been unable to give if his personal attention.

The mail order company president said he believed the southeast must turn to other crops, and not make cotton the chief dependence of the farmer. He said he did not believe cotton could be produced profitably in this section, with its rolling land and the need for use of fertilizer, in competition with Texas where no fertilizer is used and the prairie lands may be cultivated with machinery.

GEORGIA MAN SLAIN IN ROBBERY ATTEMPT

MIAMI, Fla., Feb. 12.—(AP)—Chief Deputy Sheriff D. C. Coleman said an intruder killed in a pistol duel that took two lives Wednesday was tentatively identified Thursday as Frank Ferguson, 28, Columbus (Ga.) bricklayer.

The identification was offered by officials of the City Mission, a welfare organization, who said the man came there for lodging three months ago.

Coleman expressed conviction the shooting of the intruder and fatal injury of Francis C. Romback, engineer, in the latter's home, grew out of an attempted robbery of the place by the man who later was killed and two companions. He said he was informed Romback won a large sum of money at the race track Tuesday, and thought this fact caused the visit.

The companions escaped in an automobile, and were the object of a search by metropolitan Miami police Thursday.

The shooting occurred at noon. Police were informed Romback, who worked nights, awoke to find two men in his room. He took a pistol from under his pillow and shot, hitting one. He in turn was fatally injured as the fire was returned.

Coleman sought to confirm identification of the dead intruder Thursday.

GRIFFIN EDITOR HITS HARD TIMES TALK

GRIFFIN, Ga., Feb. 12.—(AP)—Quimby Melton, editor of the Griffin Daily News, says folks who talk bad business should be ashamed of themselves.

Discussing the hardships of men and women of Georgia and the south in the days following the War Between the States, he said in his newspaper:

"If those men and women could surmount the tremendous obstacles that faced them, certainly we can win out against the slight odds that confront us.

"The real fight that faces each of us is a fight with ourselves. We must 'sell' ourselves that Georgia and our nation are fundamentally sound. Once we have won that fight the future will be bright. The future will be what we make it. Our business will be exactly what we make it."

Editor Melton suggests that "the way to create a fortune is to buy from pessimists." Five years from now, he says, "Most American businessmen will belong to the I-Wish-I-Had Club.

ROAD BEAUTIFICATION PRAISED BY M'HATTON

Development in Last 20 Years Remarkable, Says Speaker at Brunswick.

BRUNSWICK, Ga., Feb. 12.—(AP) Dr. T. H. McHatton, professor of horticulture at the Georgia State College of Agriculture, Thursday night lectured on civic and highway beautification at Memorial auditorium under the auspices of the Glynn County Garden Clubs.

Dr. McHatton said "gardening is an art that has been intimately woven into the fabric of man's civilization" and then traced the developments in the old world and up to the present time.

The development in Georgia for the general improvement of the natural beauties of the public domain in the last 20 years in Georgia has been remarkable, Dr. McHatton said.

Interest Shown.

"There is an increasing interest," the noted horticulturist said, "in the general appearance of the community. It is kept cleaner and in better condition, and the individual home owner, whether he cares for it or not, is caught in the stream and finds it necessary to keep his private place in order.

"Just recently this interest has been extended to our highways, and at the present time Georgia has a unique and most modern system of handling the proposition.

"Upon the completion of a thoroughfare, the landscape representatives of the Georgia State College of Agriculture treat the problem as a landscape project and carefully travel the road from city to city, making recommendations for the enhancement of its natural beauty and the planting of trees and shrubs adaptable to the multi-various soil conditions found throughout the length of the particular highway.

"Plans of the road project are furnished the state highway board and when these have been completed from a landscape standpoint, they are returned to the highway people. Then such county and community along the road purchase the plants as required to fulfil the plan and the highway board plants them with the understanding that they will be kept up through the future years.

"Thus our cities are not only being improved, but the roadways leading into them are being beautified. Georgia has been an outstanding state in the southeast along this line. Truly have the landscape activities within our borders borne fruit, and it is a pleasure to be present in your city and to discuss with you plans for the improvement and the enhancing of its natural beauties made world famous through the pens of Georgia's poets and litterateurs."

NEW CONSTITUTION URGED BY BICKERS

Savannah Editor Delivers Georgia Day Address in Athens.

ATHENS, Ga., Feb. 12.—A new constitution for Georgia was urged here Thursday night by D. G. Bickers, associate editor of the Savannah Morning News, in a Georgia Day address at the State Teachers' College. Dr. J. M. Pound, president of the college, presided and introduced Mr. Bickers.

The editor spoke at a banquet given at the college in commemoration of the founding of Georgia by James Edward Oglethorpe February 12, 1733. He discussed the forthcoming observance of the founding of Georgia in 1933 on its 200th anniversary, and commented on the state's great development and history since its settlement.

Mr. Bickers said Georgia at 200 is like a man or woman, physically, at 75 or 80, in the nature of things needing a new, vitally functioning constitution. He drew an analogy between Georgia and Georgians, the constitution and "constituents," the activity of the people in their lives and the political set-up under which they are supposed to be protected and helped by state government.

New Conditions.

The editor said that the constitution is the expression of the will, the aspiration, the purpose of the people, and their expression of how they are to be governed politically while they are providing for their economical support. The constitution of 1877, said Mr. Bickers, was as good as it could have been at that time, an unusual time, but it does not serve now under new conditions the fathers never dreamed possible in 60 years.

He compared the seal of state as the combined thought of the people and showed that the last seal made is now worn out, the constitution a patched, vulcanized piece of work, shabby and undependable. He urged the students, now in training to become teachers of the future citizens of the state, to be thinking of the constitutional convention which must come within the next few years, called by the people and "as some fear" controlled by the people for the purpose of bringing the organic law of the government abreast of the needs of the times.

Howard Coffin Speaks.

Howard Coffin, developer of Sapelo Island, near Brunswick, deplored the state's failure to take advantage of its historical background, resources and climate in attracting tourists and investors, in a speech at the University of Georgia on Georgia Day.

"We visit Grand Canyon, Bunker Hill and other places of interest," Mr. Coffin said, "without realizing we have here in Georgia things of more interest."

The developer also called attention to "deplorable" conditions in the state government, the state's roads, political quarrels and the tendency of the people to sit idly by, for the most part, and let tourists go to other parts of the country which in their undeveloped state "offered no better advantages than Georgia."

Mr. Coffin came to Athens by air from Sapelo Island in two hours, averaging a speed of two miles per minute.

Mrs. Massengale, who will sponsor the appearance in Atlanta March 7, of Ely Culbertson, winner of all bridge championships in 1930, invited Sir Derrick and others taking part in the Augusta tournament to hear Mr. Culbertson.

Leading bridge clubs throughout Georgia will send representatives to Atlanta for Mr. Culbertson's appearance at the Atlanta Biltmore. Mr. Culbertson will appear in Atlanta under auspices of St. Mary's Guild of St. Philip's Cathedral, of which Mrs. Massengale is president.

"Tournaments such as Sir Derrick Wernher will conduct in Augusta are evidence that Augusta enthusiasts wish to keep their game abreast of the times," Mrs. Massengale said. "Mr Culbertson spent eight years developing the approach and forcing systems of bidding which he used so successfully in defeating such old authorities as Work and Whitehead and Lenz. He will describe these methods in detail in his Atlanta lecture, which probably will be attended by a large party of Augusta experts."

Club will celebrate "Better Business Women's Week," March 8-14, with a public relations dinner Thursday, March 12, and a special program. Mrs. Blanche Richey and Miss Kate Hammerschmidt are co-chairmen of the committee in charge, and "Public Relationship and Co-operation" is to be the slogan of the club for "Better Business Women's Week."

The club pledged itself to co-operate with the Atlanta better business commission in its "clean-up, paint-up, repair and rebuild now" campaign, and with the committee of the woman's division of the Chamber of Commerce sponsoring same, Mrs. James E. Don't take chances on RANCID OIL in STALE COFFEE . . . it causes Indigestion . . . Headaches . . . Sleeplessness

You're safe with Chase & Sanborn's . . . It's guaranteed fresh

Rushed straight from roaster to grocer . . . every can plainly marked with date he receives it

OIL IN COFFEE? Yes, approximately a half cup in every pound. Oil delicately fresh and fragrant as sweet butter when the coffee is fresh. But rancid, health-endangering when the coffee is stale!

Chase & Sanborn's gives you full protection from this alarming menace. This coffee is rushed to your grocer straight from our roasters, every can dated the day he receives it.

Regularly we inspect those dates . . . if we find any can more than ten days old, we remove it . . . replace it with a fresh can. Chase & Sanborn's Coffee is guaranteed fresh when you get it!

You will find this delicious quality blend reasonably priced . . . no higher than the ordinary packaged coffees.

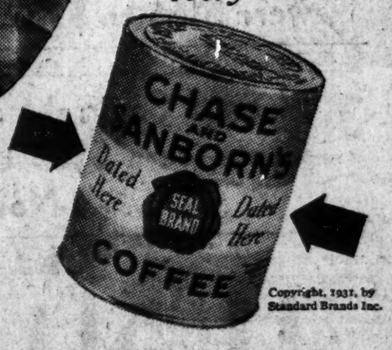

Fresh coffee or stale . . . which shall it be? Remember that stale coffee contains dangerous rancid oil . . . approximately a half cup to a pound . . . and that this rancid oil causes indigestion, headaches, sleeplessness.

Fresh coffee is deliciously refreshing . . . a wholesome, mild stimulant provided by nature to brace us up! But be sure to use Chase & Sanborn's . . . the coffee that's always fresh.

Guaranteed FRESH! Look for the date on every can . . .

Don't think high price will protect you against stale coffee . . . It won't! As positive evidence that even high-priced coffees are often very stale, look at this photograph. It was taken in a Michigan grocery where the photographer bought an expensive coffee that was nine months old. His affidavit is on file!

LIGHTFOOT TALKS ABOUT TREES.

By Thornton W. Burgess.

If strength with beauty blended be
You'll find it in a noble tree.
—Old Mother Nature.

"What have you been eating while the snow has been deep, Peter?" asked Lightfoot the Deer.

"Mostly bark," replied Peter with a sigh. "Bark is better than nothing, but it grows tiresome after a while. My, what wouldn't I give for a mouthful of nice young sweet clover this very minute!"

Lightfoot nodded. "I know," said he. "You are no worse off than some of the rest of us. I've been living on trees until my mouth waters at the thought of a change of food."

"Living on trees!" exclaimed Peter.

"Living on trees just as you have been," replied Lightfoot.

"But I haven't been living on trees," protested Peter, looking puzzled.

"Didn't you just tell me that you have been living on bark?" demanded Lightfoot. "And a lot of that bark you got from young trees. If that isn't living on trees I would like to know what is."

"Of course," said Peter. "I hadn't thought of it in that way. Do—do you eat bark, Lightfoot?"

"I eat twiggs and tender shoots so, of course, I eat some bark," replied Lightfoot. He walked over to a young hemlock and took a mouthful of twigs with their green needle-like leaves.

"Do you really like that?" asked Peter, who more than once had tried it and didn't like it.

"It wouldn't be my choice if there were plenty to choose from, but hungry folk do not fuss over what they find to eat," replied Lightfoot, "and the twigs are really quite tender."

"Those are funny little leaves," remarked Peter.

Lightfoot nodded. "They are the shortest leaves of any of the trees that stay green all winter," said he, "and they are not hard and prickly like some. Have you ever noticed how differently they grow from the leaves of most other trees that are green all the year?"

Peter shook his head and looked puzzled. "In what way do they grow differently?" he asked.

"Well, just look at this tree here," replied Lightfoot. "The branches are broad and flat, because those little leaves seem to be growing from opposite sides of the twigs."

"That's so!" exclaimed Peter. "I hadn't noticed it before. That is what makes such fine hiding places under these trees, especially when they are covered with snow. When I am over here in the Green Forest I always keep my eyes open for this kind of tree in case I want to hide, as I did when I heard you coming. Do you hear something?"

Lightfoot was standing with head high, his big ears pointed forward and his great soft eyes very wide open. His nose was pointed into the wind. That is, he was facing in the direction from which the Merry Little Breezes were blowing. "No," said he. "I don't hear anything, but I think I will in a few minutes. One of those two-legged creatures is coming this way."

Peter knew that he meant a man or a boy. "If you do not hear him, how do you know?" demanded Peter.

"I smell him," replied Lightfoot briefly. "There, I heard him then."

Peter's long ears were up straight and he was listening with all his might. Then he, too, heard a faint crunching sound and he knew that it was made by the breaking of snow crust by some one too heavy for the crust to bear.

"Good-bye," said Lightfoot, and then bounded away. Peter waited a moment and then hopped under one of those little snow-covered hemlock trees about which they had been talking. He was quite hidden there and squatted down listening to the approaching footsteps. "I hope there isn't a dog with him," muttered Peter.

GROUP STUDIES PLANS FOR KENTUCKY BANK

LOUISVILLE, Ky., Feb. 12.—(AP) A committee of Louisville citizens announced today a plan for the organization of a new national bank from the assets of the National Bank of Kentucky.

The committee said it hoped for ultimate payment of 66 2-3 per cent on deposits in the closed bank. Success of the plan, the committee said, depended on the co-operation of depositors in the National Bank of Kentucky. The plan calls for a bank of $1,000,000 capital and $1,000,000 surplus to be created largely through the co-operation of the larger depositors.

Jagger Compares Market With Industry, Business

BY CLAUDE A. JAGGER,
Associated Press Financial Editor.

NEW YORK, Feb. 12.—(AP)—The question of "How far?" faces Wall Street with the resumption of security trading tomorrow after the Lincoln's birthday holiday.

It is a question of how far the stock market has gone in its sudden four-day upturn, toward bringing equity share values into reasonable relation to the improvement since the turn of the year in major lines of industry.

It is easy to measure the advance in the stock market. It is extremely difficult this early in the year to take a measure of the progress made by industry.

The furious assault upon the bear element in the share market has restored aggregate values to the level of late October. The gain in the quoted value of all shares listed on the stock exchange may be estimated at between $3,000,000,000 and $4,000,000,000.

Available statistical index figures measuring the volume of business activity do not, allowing for normal seasonal changes, show that operations have returned to the level of October. Business recovery is always uneven, however. Steel ingot output is now estimated at 50 per cent of capacity, the best figure since late October, and automobile production is estimated at the highest level since September.

Business recovery is difficult to perceive in its early stages, and many commentators express the opinion it will not be clearly visible until it has been under way for some months. Few, however, are skeptical enough to assert that industry is basically worse off than it was in late October.

Some conservative observers have felt the bull drive in the stock market has been wholly unjustified by general economic developments and is likely to prove as abortive as the numerous bullish demonstrations in 1930.

On the other hand it is argued the heavy volume of distress liquidation late in 1930, because of the drastic financial adjustments necessitated at that time, had resulted in an abnormally low level of share values, completely out of line with reasonable estimates of worth; that the hangover of nervousness and fear from that trying period had imposed a heavy weight upon the share market which needed lifting.

The stock market has always boasted its ability to forecast economic changes, although its claim to that ability has been damaged by the events of the last year and a half, if, indeed, the market is to regain its reputation as a prophet and if notable business recovery is to be apparent by April—and there is abundant historical precedent for believing it will—bullishness at this time is distinctly in order, assert the bulls.

Regardless of underlying conditions the share market managed to attract the most extensive buying in nearly a year during the last few days. While the most spectacular activity has been in manipulative issues, the advance has been broad and general. Net advances in scores of shares for the four-day movement range from $2 to $30 a share.

Amateurs Battle Way to Semi-Finals in S. E. A. A. U. Ring Meet

Atlanta Refuses Offer of Augusta Club as Second Minor Farm

Here is good news for Tech supporters.

These midterm examinations at Tech are tough. The obstacle often trips a score or more in all classes and plays hob with spring sports.

This time the entire freshman contingent repulsed the faculty attack, which is something of a record and worthy of note in these days when the overemphasis loon is calling to his mate in the swamps.

Three varsity football men are out for the long count, but it seems that Roy MacArthur is not one of them as reported.

All in all, it was an inspiring spring season from the coaches' standpoint. It seems that W. A. Alexander's appeal to the young men to keep up in class work had a wholesome effect.

CHICK "LEARNED" HIM.

Chick Shiver, the University of Georgia star at baseball and football, is a front rank major league ball player since he signed with the Detroit Tigers. As such he is entitled to recall the good old days of year before last when he broke in as a Texas league rookie.

One tale should be sent along with Chick to Detroit.

The first time Chick was sent up to bat as a pinch hitter the manager said to him:

"Take one for me, Shiver," meaning, of course, to let the first strike go by.

So Chick took one. Then expecting a ball on the next pitch, Chick stood there and let the agate whizz over for strike two. The manager on the bench exploded into sarcastic wrath.

"Let another one go by, you big farmer," he roared, not meaning his words to be taken literally.

And Chick let strike three buzz through the groove.

When he got back to the bench the manager was beside himself.

"Go into the clubhouse and burn your uniform," the great man shouted and muttered uncomplimentary things about college boys who thought they could play baseball.

Chick left the bench without a word.

And after the game when the squad manager came into the clubhouse he sniffed the air.

"What's that burning?" he asked.

"My uniform . . . there in the stove," said Chick.

The manager's jaw sagged. Then he laughed.

"Son, you get a bonus for that. You're the first ball player I ever had who would do what I told him to."

NO DRUDGERY TO THEM.

Vance Maree was sitting in the library reading at Georgia Tech last Monday. Along about 3 o'clock he got to thinking about the boys getting into uniforms and starting spring practice.

He stood it as long as he could and then set out for the field. Rather embarrassed he asked Coach Alexander if he couldn't have a uniform.

Earl Dunlap had a similar attack of nostalgia and he, too, came around for a uniform. That is how Dunlap and Maree happen to be helping coach in spring practice.

And still that Carnegie report of a few months ago insisted that boys hate to play football and do so only for fear their companions will berate them for not being out for the team.

ALL PUT OUT ON PERSONAL FOULS, PERHAPS.

THOMASVILLE, Ga., Feb. 12.—Members of the Y. M. C. A. basketball team thought they had an engagement for a game against the team of the Athletic Club in the nearby town of Sale City Tuesday night. So the "Buds" journeyed in automobiles to Sale City, only to find on their arrival that the basketball court there was entirely deserted, and no one present to explain why there was not to be a game.

WAS FARM LIFE EVER LIKE THAT?

When it finally got into type, one of the speakers in the debate on the farming problem at Emory University the other night asked: "Where are the orchids and the poultry that every farm once had?"

There is a clever remark somewhere in that line about orchids and chickens, but dawg-gone it, it escapes me right now.

Pace of Jack Sheehan Job for Any Youngster

Veteran Infielder of Crackers Has Pair of Legs Hard To Beat; Plays All Games.

By Ralph McGill.

JACK SHEEHAN'S legs have scampered through 303 games of 306 played by the Atlanta Crackers in the past two seasons.

Last season saw him perform in each of the 153 games played by the Crackers. He missed three in 1929. No other second baseman was even close to those figures.

Unless the official records change things it will be found that Jack Sheehan was the only player to play in all his club's games. There were just 36 players in more than 100 games. There were about a half dozen who were doing the same old reel in more than 150 games.

THE 1930 season was a great one for the veterans. Most of them stuck in there, keeping right up with the legs of the youngsters.

Sheehan's performance was one of the most spectacular the Crackers have ever had. He missed but three games of the 153 games played in 1929. A search of the records at Spiller field Thursday failed to find him absent when the roll was called each day.

Sheehan is a veteran with major league service behind him. Yet age has not withered nor custom staled the infinite variety of his technique about second base.

MISERABLE START.

HE WAS off to a miserable start. The training camp at Douglas did not permit him to get in shape. The first two weeks saw him making more than his share of errors. Yet he rounded into form and played dazzling defensive baseball for the remainder of the year. It was his cooperation with Luke Appling which

Harvey Battles Dundee Tonight

NEW YORK, Feb. 12.—(AP)—Len Harvey, slender, pale British middleweight who likes nothing better in training than a Welsh rarebit before he retires of a midnight, will help himself to another portion of nightmare tomorrow evening in Madison Square Garden.

Harvey tackles Vince Dundee, wide-eyed Baltimore Italian, in a 12-round return match. The Englishman lost a twelve-round decision to Dundee in his American debut in the Garden after flooring the Italian twice in the first round. Dundee climbed off the floor like an avenging spirit that night to slug and tug and harass the British champion out of a close verdict.

AMATEUR MEET IN SEMI-FINAL ROUND TONIGHT

Plenty of Action Marks Bouts in Dixie Title Tourney.

By Ed Danforth.

From 2 o'clock in the afternoon until 10 o'clock last night gloves flew in salvos and broadsides at the Atlanta Athletic Club.

Boxers of all sizes tore through the first rounds of the Southeastern A. A. U. boxing championships as fast as they could be hustled into the ring and out of it again. And when the last scrap—the seventeenth of the round—was concluded last night, the stage was set for 14 semi-final bouts tonight.

Al Doonan, of the A. A. C., announced that the first of the 14 bouts would start at 8 o'clock. The card will be packed with action from start to finish. Fourteen bouts for one dollar constitute the biggest boxing bargain ever offered in Atlanta.

These amateurs go after their boxing in deadly earnest. They waste no time at all in the ring. They break at word from the referee and burn with the simple idea of landing as hard and as often as possible. The boys come from Tech High, G. M. A., A. A. C., Presbyterian College, Fairfax, Ala.; Cartersville, Ga., Nashville Y. M. H. A., North Georgia College, Fort Valley, Riverside and Fort Benning, to say nothing of an unattached Atlantan or two. All classes from flyweights to light heavies are represented. The unlimited class does not appear until the finals.

One of the best battles of the first round was staged by Max Morris, Jr., in knocking out John Sudderth, of the North Georgia Aggies, in the first round. Morris never let his opponent rest and never missed a shot with either hand. He floored Sudderth eight seconds before the bell, but the North Georgian was unable to answer the gong for the second round.

But of the two, Max Morris, Sr., fought the harder. The father who used to be a corking boxer himself, sat in the audience and punched and jabbed and "worked" as hard as his son did. He was tired but smiling at the finish.

The only other knockout of the first round came when Neil Truesdale, of Presbyterian College, kayoed Robert Stuart, of G. M. A., in the first.

James Prophet, of Fort Benning, apparently not a member of the firm of profit and loss, took two bouts in the first day's fighting. He trimmed a campmate, Howard Hill, in the after noon and picked off "Whitey" Williams, of Cartersville, in the evening. Williams and Prophet put on a whirlwind mill that had the crowd cheering, but the soldier was too good a sharpshooter for the Cartersville lad.

The final bout presented a genuine ring comedian in "Red" Huff, of Fort Benning. He kept the crowd convulsed. Everybody was laughing except his opponent who was taking a shower of gloves every ten seconds. Huff won the decision and goes into the finals tonight.

Rufus (Baggage) Bass, acting as inspector of gloves and bandages, was kept so busy preparing the young pugilists for the ring that he had to eat his supper off a rubbing table. The meet was conducted smoothly by the committee. Mike Chambers and Steve Hartney were referees. W. A. Alexander, R. H. Martin, Phil Degnon and Harry Vaughn were judges.

Bantamweights—Mac Crowe, Mobile, Ala., defeated Joe Apperson, North Georgia Aggies.

Featherweights—William Lelnovitch, Fort Benning won from J. Thompson, unattached, by default; J. Posey, unattached, defeated Buster Brown, Valdosta High; Nell Truesdale, Presbyterian, knocked Robert Stuart, G. M. A., in the first round.

Leightweights—Alfred Huff, Fort Benning, defeated Herbert Yutmeyer, Fort Benning; Alfred Huff, Benning, defeated Leon Langston, North Georgia Aggies; George Claussen, Mobile, defeated William York, North Georgia Aggies; Buddy Enzor, A. A. C., defeated B. Thompson, unattached.

Welterweights—B. Bailey, Birmingham, defeated Vickery, unattached; Jack West, Riverside, defeated Henry, unattached; James Prophet, Benning, defeated Howard Hill, Benning; James Prophet, Benning, defeated James Williams, Cartersville; Jack West, Riverside, defeated B. Bailey, Birmingham; George Taylor, Riverside, won by default from Stewart, unattached.

Middleweights—Grady Flynn, Mobile, won from Merry by default; Max Morris, Atlanta, knocked out John Sudderth, Benning, in first round; Joe Wofford, A. A. C., defeated Benjamin Pollock, Nashville.

TONIGHT'S BOUTS.

Flyweights—Homer Sears, Tech High, vs. Roy Ellington, Fairfax, Ala., High; Bert Harrison, Riverside, vs. William Floyd, Fort Benning.

Perkins Feared Lost to Jackets

Bill Perkins, star forward of the Georgia Tech basketball team and present individual high scorer in the Southern conference, is feared lost to the Jackets for the "rubber" game with Georgia at Athens Saturday night.

Perkins has been suffering with influenza and it is thought he will be unable to take his post against the Bulldogs in the deciding game of their 1931 series.

Tech's recent fine showing is due largely to the playing of Perkins. His loss will be keenly felt.

Triangles Defeat J. P. C. Five, 38-26

A double defeat was handed the Jewish Progressive Club basketball teams Thursday night on the J. P. C. court when the Y. M. C. A. Triangles beat the Progressives, 39 to 28, and the Peachtree Christians defeated the Reds, 31 to 29, in two extra five-minute periods.

After a slow start in the first half with only 13 points scored against 11 for the Progressives, the Triangles opened up with a barrage of field goals in the second period and was never threatened.

Fincher, center, with 11 points, was the high scorer for the Triangles, while O'Connor, guard, and Tasker and Brock, forwards, played well.

Finkelstein was the only consistent-ent sharpshooter for the losers. He scored 15 of the 28 points. Friedland was shifted from a forward to a guard position and in addition to holding the "Y" forwards well in check he found time to score seven points.

Cohen Offers Trophy To Hill Climb Winner

Berry Cohen, former prominent motorcycle rider and now a bicycle dealer, has announced that he will present a silver trophy to one of the winners in the charity hill climb slated for February 22 on Roswell road.

His trophy will be given for the expert event, which is open to both amateur and professional riders and affords the amateurs their only chance to compete against professionals and not lose their amateur standing.

Entry blanks were mailed Tuesday to two dozen of the best motorcycle riders in the southern states.

Word has been received that a team consisting of Lonnie Kirk, southern professional champion last year, and Willie Kirk, his brother, who is an outstanding amateur rider, will be entered from Macon. Three entries are expected from Florida.

The hill climb will be a special event of a southern motorcycle sales convention and more than 200 riders and dealers are expected to be present. It will also mark the formal opening of the Atlanta Motorcycle Club's country home.

H. N. PURDY WINS BILLIARD TITLE IN MATCH HERE

Atlanta Cue Ace Takes Crown After Play-Off From Johnson.

By Herb Clark.

Fighting off a game and stubborn challenge of young Tommy Johnson, of Chattanooga, to win the play-off match at 50-46 in 100 innings, Harry N. Purdy, of Atlanta, brought the southeastern sectional billiard championship to Atlanta at the Shrine mosque Thursday night.

Both entered Thursday's play with a record of three victories and one defeat in previous games. Purdy's slate had been clean until he met Johnson Wednesday, when the youngster turned the tables on him.

BETTERS RATING.

Johnson bettered his rating at the expense of a fellow-townsman, C. K. Faucett, in an afternoon match, winning, 50-34, in 98 innings. Both amassed high runs of four.

G. C. Bruner, of Birmingham, with a bare chance Thursday morning, was scratched from the lists by Paul Lovejoy, of Smyrna, in the first of the day's games. Lovejoy going 101 innings to win, 57-47. Lovejoy's high run of six beat Bruner's effort by one.

Drama started stalking through the halls of the Mosque as the evening's play opened. Purdy, staking his hopes and striving to vindicate the judgment of those who had acclaimed him favorite when the tournament opened Monday, faced Bruner. And, held even early, Purdy swept ahead to win, 50-40, scoring a high run of three to Bruner's two, in 110 innings for the right to meet Johnson in the play-off for the title.

JOHNSON SCORES.

The young Chattanoogan, going scoreless for two innings while Purdy was also trying vainly, made a point in his third inning. He ran three in the fourth, three in his sixth to lead by three points. Purdy came back to tie the count at 9-9 in the tenth inning. Purdy took the lead in the twelfth by a single point as Johnson went scoreless.

And from the twelfth inning to Johnson's seventy-eighth Purdy held a lead which ran as high as nine and was never less than two. In his seventy-eighth inning, again in his seventy-ninth, Johnson tied the score, first at 36-all, then at 37-all. Each time Purdy stepped away again in his inning.

With his younger foe faltering momentarily, the veteran again ran out in front to lead by three points, at 46-43, as the pair played out their ninetieth innings. Johnson, however, was not yet vanquished. He ran two after one scoreless frame and added another point to tie the count at 46-46 in the ninety-third inning. That was his last threat, however. Purdy pulled away by one in one more inning, made it two in yet another, and went out with an unfinished run of two at the 100-inning mark.

IN NATIONAL MEET.

Purdy, champion of the southeast, will represent the section in the national tournament late in March. He will face Robert Harper, of Denver, present titlist, and the champions of six other sections.

G. R. Collins, president of the National Billiard Association, commended the players participating and Dixie in general for the present tournament. He had personally supervised the running off of the meet.

Purdy, by his victory, took one leg on the large silver championship cup and in addition was presented with a personal silver trophy. Johnson also won a trophy for his runner-up showing, also being given a desk set for having played the best game, one of 70 innings. Lovejoy was rewarded for having scored the tournament's high run of seven.

He Fights on Pa's Card

MAX SCHMELING COLORFUL CHAMP

German Rates With Dempsey as Outstanding Fighter.

In a fighter they call it color. What is it? Carnera has it. So has Stribling, Risko, Paolino, Jack Berg, Canzoneri and Walker. Sullivan, Corbett, Fitzsimmons, O'Brien and Jack Dempsey had color, but among the modern heavyweights two men stand out as the most colorful who have ever reached, or attempted to reach the pugilistic heights. They are Jack Dempsey, former world's champion, and the present titleholder, Max Schmeling.

In his fights here in America he showed himself to be a superfighter, who could whip anyone in his division, and still improves. Maxie has beaten Risko, Sekyra, Paulino, Corri and Monte, when other heavyweights were mentioned in the same breath with theirs.

They wanted none of Risko, who had beaten Sharkey, Berlenbach and other topnotchers. Neither did they care for Paulino, stiff puncher and one who didn't know what the word "quit" meant. But Schmeling couldn't understand the American viewpoint. Fighting to him was not a matter of picking opponents. It meant going in there and fighting until someone either quit or the fight ended. It was a different attitude to take.

The fight fans love a colorful fighter. That's why they want to see Dempsey, and others who possessed that elusive "it," and stayed away when Tunney was on the cards, even before Gene won the title. Schmeling, who appears here on Max Abelson's next fight program on February 17, at the auditorium, drew the crowd at Yankee stadium when he fought Sharkey, and already, months before he fights Stribling in defense of his title, interest in the bout is at fever pitch and is already a topic of discussion wherever fight fans gather.

Schmeling Misses Storm in Senate.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 12.—(AP)—Max Schmeling, of Germany, visited the senate today—but he arrived too late to witness a verbal encounter on the floor that might have made him feel somewhat at home.

The heavyweight boxer called upon Senator Wagner, of New York, also a native of Germany. The senator escorted Max into the gallery.

Just before Max arrived Senators Robinson, of Arkansas, and Glass, of Virginia, two of the democrats' most vigorous warriors, had engaged in an exchange on the floor over the drouth relief legislation in which there was plenty of pounding of desks but the scene was one of calm for the boxer.

Stribling, Walker and Others Preparing for Miami Fistic Card.

The first two are to fight under the promotional wing of Frank Bruen, March 5. Walker will meet Johnny Risko, with Pa Stribling as the impresario, February 24.

Risko is scheduled to start his training Friday.

At Walker's camp at Hollywood today, W. L. (Young) Stribling, Macon (Ga.) heavyweight title contender, went through a brief workout to keep in trim for his scheduled exhibition on the Walker-Risko card.

Win Day Is Upset In Miami Biltmore

CORAL GABLES, Fla., Feb. 12.—(AP)—Winfield Day, Jr., Chicago school boy golfer, fell victim of a major upset in the first round of the annual Miami Biltmore St. Valentine's Day tournament today, losing to Don McCallister, Miami High school athletic coach, 2 and 1.

Day leaped into the golfing spotlight when he won the Miami midwinter amateur last month and has been well in the running in several events since. He was regarded as one of the favorites in the tournament over the Miami Biltmore course.

Ed Joyce, Chicago, who took medal honors, joined Day in the ranks of the defeated. He fell before the stroking of G. L. Miller, Jr., Coconut Grove, 5 and 4.

In other first-round matches, Jimmy West, Miami, defeated William Connellan, Detroit, 1 up in 20 holes; Tom Davies, Pittsburgh, Pa., won from Roy Quale, Chicago, 2 and 1; H. B. Rust, Jr., Providence, R. I., turned back Bob Kaufman, Canton, Ohion, 1 up in 19 holes; W. H. Caswell, New York, eliminated Fred Jerrould, Buffalo, 1 up in 19 holes; H. W. Bash, Columbus, Ohio, beat Harold Cuthbert, Philadelphia, 2 and 1, and Lee Chase, Buffalo, trimmed F. G. Bannerott, Pittsburgh, 1 up in 19 holes.

NO IMMEDIATE HELP POSSIBLE, CRACKERS SAY

Columbus Team Expected To Land Sally Berth This Week.

By Ralph McGill.

Atlanta turned down a tentative offer of the Augusta club for use as a farm Thursday afternoon. The Crackers are already owners of the Columbus franchise and hope to land it in the Sally league.

The offer from Augusta included the franchise, 16 players and free use of the ball park if the Crackers would take over the club and finance it. Augusta has failed to back the club and it was dropped from the league Wednesday. It could be reinstated, however, if properly financed.

FANS WORK.

Augusta baseball fans are making desperate efforts to save the club. The president of the Augusta Wolves, Marvin Wolfe, has retired and will not assume control again. He is generally credited with having saved baseball for Augusta several times in the past.

"We would like to help out Augusta," said R. J. Spiller, business manager and one of the Cracker owners, "but it is impossible. We have taken over the Columbus franchise for a period of years. It now appears that Columbus is assured of a berth in the Sally league. With Augusta and Columbia both out at least two clubs must be taken in. Columbus is a great baseball city and deserves a place which I feel sure she will get.

"It would be unwise for the Atlanta club to attempt to carry two clubs as farms. I understand that Augusta has three ball players who are major league prospects. The Atlanta club, however, can do nothing at this time."

VOTE DUE.

A vote on the Columbus club and on Selma and Jacksonville is expected today or tomorrow. Meanwhile the Cracker office is standing by for return of contracts.

Thursday brought one signed contract and the promise of another. J. D. Patterson, rookie catcher, was the first to get in a contract this week. Amos Martin, Oglethorpe infielder who played a few games with the Crackers last season, called at the office and announced that his contract might be expected within a day or so.

Atlanta hopes to be able to reduce the present squad of 41 but would not be adverse to increasing it with the proper men. Rip Radcliffe, former Selma first baseman and this year property of the White Sox, may come to Atlanta.

BENNY LIKED.

Bill White, manager of the Columbus club for a number of years, believes that Benny Rothstein, Cracker rookie, is already a better prospect than Radcliffe.

This morning's mail will bring in some additional contracts and by the end of the week the Crackers hope to have a third of the men on the dotted line.

The baseball field is already green, a ton or so of grass seed having been sown on the diamond and outfield. Work has started on the fence which will run from the scoreboard in center field to the right field foul line. It will not make home runs easy. Home runs over the new fence will have to travel farther than those which Nick Cullop used to hit into the left field bleachers.

Streit Named Head Of Olympic Mat Body

NEW YORK, Feb. 12.—(AP)—The Olympic wrestling committee selected July 4 and 5, 1932, as the dates for the final trials to choose the team to represent the United States in the Olympic games at Los Angeles.

No site was selected but the committee favored a mid-western city. The 26 A. A. U. district championships and all college conference tournaments will be considered as preliminary trials.

C. W. Streit, of Birmingham, Ala., was named permanent chairman of the committee as well as manager of the team.

Lindy Hood Out For Rest of Season

Baseball Abandoned At Tulane University

NEW ORLEANS, Feb. 12.—(AP)—Intercollegiate baseball at Tulane University is abandoned under announcement made today by the college athletic council because "the student body neither cares for nor supports baseball."

"After most carefully considering the matter from all angles," said the council's announcement, "the Tulane athletic council has definitely decided to abandon intercollegiate baseball at Tulane this year.

"This decision was reached with greatest reluctance, but the logic of the facts seems to permit no other course.

"Chief among these facts it may be pointed out that the student body neither cares for nor supports baseball. This has been demonstrated by game after game in the past."

Conger Seen as New Indoor Mile Champion, Given Record Chance

I. A. C. SPEEDER MAY SET MARK MONDAY NIGHT

Only Spur of Competition Needed To Send Ray Home.

By Henry McLemore,
United Press Staff Correspondent.

NEW YORK, Feb. 12.—(UP)—Ray Conger, who eight years ago yanked up his overalls and won his first mile race over a field of Iowa farmer boys, is likely to become the world's indoor champion at that distance before the current track season is ended.

He came within 1 and 3-5 seconds of turning the trick last Saturday night in the Millrose A. A. games when he won the Wanamaker mile in 4 minutes, 13 and 3-5 seconds. He makes his next appearance Monday night at the New York A. C. carnival and, given the proper competition, may equal or break the 4:12 record held jointly by Paavo Nurmi and Joie Ray.

Conger almost said as much himself when interviewed by the United Press today. Not in a bragging way, mind you, for the long-legged, serious-faced miler is just about as modest and unassuming an athlete as you will ever meet.

"Naturally, I hope to break the record Monday night or some time during the season, for records are the magnet that keep most track men running. That is to say, only men who have never won a race run purely for the joy of coming home in front, no matter what the time.

"My race in the Wanamaker makes me believe that maybe I will get the record some time this year. Despite the fairly good time I was in fine shape when I broke the tape. In fact, I never came through a race in better condition."

We asked if he could have made better time in the Wanamaker.

"It's mighty late to say so, but I believe I could. If I had known I was in such good shape I would have started my sprint earlier. But that's the trouble—you never know just how much you have left. It would have been most embarrassing to have started 'kicking' a hundred yards before I did, and been unable to reach the finish."

He was asked why he invariably lagged until near the bell lap.

"In order to see how the other fellows are holding up or out. When you are out in front you can't tell, and that makes you worry."

What do runners think about during a race?

"That's according to what kind of race it is. When I was running cross-country at Iowa State I used to take in the scenery as I moved along, not worrying until I felt a pain in my legs or side.

"In a mile race, however, there is no time to watch the scenery, if any, for you are too busy thinking about your position, how many more laps to go, your condition, and the other fellows' condition."

Conger said he always gets excited before a race. The bigger the race, the bigger the excitement. He does not get excited to the point where his muscles refuse to function. Just enough to put him on edge.

He got his biggest thrill when he defeated Nurmi. The thrill would have been bigger, he said, had Nurmi been at his peak instead of on the decline.

"But," he added, "I wouldn't have beaten him in that case."

Conger plans to continue his track work until after the Olympics and then call its quits.

BOZO OFF FOR EAST.

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., Feb. 12.—(UP)—Battling Bozo, Birmingham's 20-year-old light-heavyweight sensation, will leave tomorrow for Chicago and New York. He has signed for an unnamed opponent in Madison Square Garden February 20.

THE SPORTLIGHT

By Grantland Rice

LUCK STILL HELPS.

A BYSTANDER wants to know what has happened to Walter Hagen's game of competitive golf. He takes up the matter that in three leading winter tournaments Hagen was not a winner or even a runner-up.

The facts are that Hagen played fine golf through all three tournaments. He needed but 881 strokes for the trio of 72-hole matches and only one man in the touring outfit beat this mark, Mortie Dutra needing only 880 strokes. This is a fine scoring average when some of the weather conditions are taken into some consideration. It also shows that a certain amount of luck is needed to be at the peak at the right time. Horton Smith also has been playing good golf along a general average, but he also has missed the flashy round needed to reach the front.

HAGEN and Smith will both be leading factors in big tournaments this spring and summer, but there are so many good ones around that the winner needs some phenomenal turn, such as Espinosa's two final 69's, to beat the pack. Hagen is hitting the ball as well as he ever did. His putting touch hasn't been quite as keen and as accurate, but the rest of his game is even steadier.

It is an unusual turn that Hagen and Horton Smith, who have been paired together for two years in many exhibitions, each took 881 strokes for the three coast tournaments referred to. When one considers all the different ways of scoring, even in an 18-hole match, the same score for 216 holes is an outstanding coincidence.

Sharkey's Chance.

THERE seem to be just two chances for Jack Sharkey to claim an opponent who will draw, with Schmeling, Stribling and Carnera barred from his vicinity. One is to have Mickey Walker win some sensational victory from Risko and the other is to have a knockout in the proposed Loughran-Campolo contest in which case the winner might look good enough to be a worth-while card.

Sharkey would outweigh Mickey Walker around 25 pounds and Campolo would outweigh Sharkey by 25 pounds. The point is that something out of the usual is needed to steam up any interest among Sharkey's possible opponents. There are no naturals waiting for him. When it comes to that, the supply of naturals was never lower in the history of boxing among the heavyweights, although once or twice, before Dempsey came along, it was just about as low.

The good, old days had as many barren spots as the present can show.

Best Fixed.

AMONG the sixteen major league baseball clubs starting south or west in a few days, there is none with a better all-around equipment of strength than Walter Johnson's Senators can show. Here is a ball club well equipped with pitching and the punch, especially pitching. It is doubtful if there is a better all-around pitching staff in either league than Washington fans will look at this spring. The nation-wide popularity of Walter Johnson will also bring an unlimited number of supporters for this club where for two years most of the neutral public backing has gone to Connie Mack.

Jackson's Battle.

TRAVIS JACKSON, of the Giants, who has been the best all-around shortstop in baseball for several years, will have more than normal competition this season from Cronin, of Washington, and Gelbert, of the St. Louis Cardinals.

They were great youngsters through 1930 and they should be even beter with the experience they have absorbed so far. Gelbert was the star, or one of the big stars, of the last World's series. He should have a brilliant year. So should Cronin.

If either plays up to advance dope the Giant star will need one of his best cam signs.

The Fishwick Test.

MISS DIANA FISHWICK, British women's golf champion, will get her baptism of American fire next week when she starts at Palm Beach. Glenna Collett will not be on hand but Miss Fishwick will find a hard barrier to break down with Helen Hicks, Virginia Van Wie, Peggy Wattles and others all set to stop the invaders who cut her way through at Formby last May. The Misses Hicks and Van Wie especially are about as good women golfers as any one could care to face.

Records and Facts.

"RECORDS," says Tuss McLaughry, of Brown, "don't always tell the facts. We received a world of publicity from our Brown 'Iron Men,' who won every game. But the Brown team of 1928, which won eight games and lost but one, was a better football team. But after Yale beat us a large part of the general publicity stopped. We always have trouble against Yale. In this game the Bulldog is nearly always at his best and the Brown Bear is a little below what he might be in other tests. These things often happen in football.

"A team that gets beaten early in the season," continued McLaughry, "may be a great team facing an off afternoon. But in the main that unbeaten record is what gets most of the comment and publicity."

BULLDOGS SEEK TO REGAIN LEAD IN TILT TONIGHT

Wildcats Invade Georgia Gym for Crucial Court Clash.

ATHENS, Ga., Feb. 12.—Georgia's basketball Bulldogs tonight completed their training for meeting the Kentucky Wildcats and Georgia Tech here Friday and Saturday nights by an hour's workout on Woodruff hall court under the supervision of Harry Mehre, football coach of the Bulldogs, who is in charge of the squad in the absence of Coach Herman J. Stegeman.

Fit and ready for the two-game series that will decide whether or not they take first place in the Southern conference standing, the Bulldogs will rest on their oars tonight as they await the advent of Carey Spicer and his teammates of the Kentucky Wildcats here tomorrow night.

With no injuries in their midst the Bulldogs will send the full strength of their heavy artillery into the battle with the Wildcats, which will decide the question of an unbeaten team remaining at the head of the Southern conference. Kentucky remains the only unbeaten five, Alabama having been handed a licking by Tennessee last week-end, and the Maryland Old Liners having been soundly thrashed by the Virginia Cavaliers at the same time.

Boasting the services of Carey Spicer, who is one of the conference's best forwards and who was the deciding factor in Kentucky's victory over Georgia Tech recently, the Kentuckians are favored to win over the Bulldogs Friday night, with Georgia given an outside chance to win. By winning from the Wildcats, the Bulldogs would be securely ensconced in first place, with 13 victories and only one defeat on their record.

Tech and Georgia will be the order of business Saturday night when the Yellow Jackets and the Bulldogs mix it up on Woodruff hall court in the rubber game of the annual three-game series. Georgia won the first game of the series here early in the season by a score of 39-30, and the Yellow Jackets came back in Atlanta two weeks ago to hand the Bulldogs their only loss of the season, 37-19.

Georgia will play the Tennessee Vols in Knoxville next Thursday in their only other conference game of the regular playing season.

Auburn Battles Vandy Saturday.

AUBURN, Ala., Feb. 12.—The Auburn-Vanderbilt basketball game slated for Auburn Saturday night in Alumni gymnasium will start promptly at 7 o'clock instead of 8 in order to allow the Commodores to catch a train for Nashville immediately after the game.

The Commodores will invade the Plains with the best team that has played the Plainsmen this year. They are in fifth place in the Southern conference with a record of seven wins and only two losses. They hold a win over the University of Tennessee, conquerors of the University of Alabama, conference champions, who had not met a setback in Dixie in two years until they encountered the Vols.

Jack Sheehan

Jack Sheehan, who is one of the most durable ball players in the game, has missed but three games in two seasons with the Crackers. He returns for second base duties this season.

PACE OF JACK HARD TO KEEP

made that young man the most valuable rookie of the 1930 season.

At bat Sheehan increased his batting average 20 points over the mark set in 1929. While other veterans were slowing up afield and at bat Sheehan batted .318 against his .298 of the year before.

Part of the season found Sheehan playing despite a bad boil on his right leg. He hustled all the season. He was the first Cracker to sign for 1930. His contract was signed before he left at the end of the 1929 campaign. Which indicates that Jack Sheehan is pretty smart and can peer into the future better than the business prophets. There was no decision to cut salaries when Jack Sheehan signed.

A FIXTURE.

THE veteran infielder is considered a fixture for the 1931 campaign. Sheehan has never been one of the idols which John Fan annually elevates to a pedestal. He is quiet, at times slightly irrascible but a thoroughly loyal, dependable team man, the sort every manager likes. But he makes no play for the stands.

Sheehan has another distinction. In these days of slugging he is probably the only real place hitter in baseball. He can place balls down the third base line with uncanny accuracy or punch them between third and short. It was this ability which increased his batting average last season. It also made him one of the most difficult men to pitch to in the Southern association.

Another youngster is coming along for him to break in this year, Johnny Ryan, young White Sox recruit, will be started at shortstop to work with Sheehan.

FAIR WEATHER AIDS JACKETS IN BRISK DRILL

Fourth Day Sees Tech Squad Improving in Condition.

Going over the same old ground, taking a new step or two which brought them closer to their goal, Georgia Tech's spring football players went through the fourth day's practice of the present session on Grant Field Thursday afternoon. Fair, cool weather helped speed the drill Thursday. The squad showed no new recruits Thursday.

The Jackets opened their session with the usual calesthenic drill. Muscles unused since December are still a mite stiff. They are working back into shape, however. It won't be long until the Jackets will be able to dispense with the setting-up exercises; will be able to dash right smack into the middle of work more strictly football.

Group instruction, with the squad split into a crew of linemen and an end-back division, followed on the program. Coach Alexander and his aides are pushing work at the Flats. The players are being put through their paces at an ever-increasing speed and under eyes daily growing more strict and observing.

The task of rebuilding the line is occupying the major share of the attention of the mentors. Coach Jack Cannon, with his assistants, is drilling his charges hard, seeking to find the necessary guards and tackles for next fall's eleven. Coach Alexander is devoting much of his time to aiding Cannon and supervising that work. The backs, working with the ends under Captain Robinson, are coming along nicely. They will be ready for Bobby Dodd when he comes to the Flats in March to take up his new duties.

Neither Earl Dunlap nor Vance Maree, reported to be ready to act as volunteer coaches during the sessions, put in an appearance Thursday.

Sigma Chi Wins Race at Emory

Charlie Ward, Sigma Chi, won the ninth running of the hare and hound race at Emory Wednesday afternoon, winning 10 points, yet his fraternity was unable to overcome the 4-point lead held by the Lamba Chi Alphas.

Coe, unattached, came in second for 9 points, and Roberts, Sigma Chi, ran third in the race, and also found the bag in the preliminary to gain 10 points.

The Lambda Chi Alphas are now leading the Sigma Chis in the fight for the loving cup that will be awarded to the fraternity or club that has the most points when all of the ten races have been held, by three points, 233-230.

In the individual race for the five gold medals, Charlie Ward is still first with 97 points; Joe Marley, Lambda Chi Alpha, is second with 81 points; Coe, unattached, is third with 78 points; Cruselle, Lambda Chi Alpha, is fourth with 73 points, and Crane is still fifth with 64 points.

This is probably the order in which the contestants will finish, as there is only one more race to be held. The tenth and last race is scheduled for Friday.

Weber in Gotham Seeking Wrestlers

Henry Weber, Atlanta wrestling promoter, is in New York today lining up some new wrestlers for matches in Atlanta. Weber flew up Thursday. He is especially anxious to get Londos for Pete Sauer in Atlanta. Other well-known figures in the game will be signed by Weber for matches in the Atlanta ring. Weber, by his personal work and by his high-class matches, has firmly established wrestling in the city as a sport some 5,000 fans like. And their number is growing.

SMITHIES FACE PURPLES TODAY

Tech High and Boys' High will play the feature of a six-game prep basketball card for Atlanta teams this afternoon and night. The Smithie and Purple B teams will play at 3 o'clock this afternoon on the Henry Grady court, while the A teams of Boys' High and G. M. A. will meet in the other game.

Other games on the menu include Decatur and Marietta, in a double-header on the Decatur court, Commercial and R. E. Lee on the Thomaston court; Fulton High and University school on the Wesley Memorial court, and Griffin and Zebulon, at Zebulon.

Of the games in the N. G. I. C. schedule, Fulton and University should furnish the best game. They are well down in the league standing and a victory this afternoon will mean a first division place for either team.

THOMAS DRILLS THREE ELEVENS IN SCRIMMAGE

Alabama Coach Grooming 4 Ten-Second Men for Backs.

TUSCALOOSA, Ala., Feb. 12.—(UP)—Coach Frank W. Thomas scrimmaged three teams of the Alabama football squad today.

Four 10-second men are being trained for backfield positions, Chappell, Joyce, Causey and Sewell. Cain, Mesley, Joyce and Holley constituted the first-team backfield today, with Swain and Smith, ends; Godfrey and Leslie, tackles; Frey and Whitworth, guards, and Captain Sharpe at center.

Atlanta Pros Meet At Ingleside Today

A special business meeting of the Atlanta Professional Golfers' Association will be held at 9:30 o'clock Monday morning at the Ingleside Country Club, it was announced Thursday by Harry Stephens, president. Jimmie Livingstone, Ingleside professional, will be host at the meeting.

Commercial and R. E. Lee will stage a great battle at Thomaston. Commercial is holding down third place while Thomaston is not far behind.

The Tech High B team is leading the league with four victories and no defeats, while Boys' High and G. M. A. are tied for second place with only one win and three losses.

Manhattan Night

By William Almon Wolff

INSTALLMENT VIII.

"No," said Peter. That ought to have warned him; the swift readiness with which he lied. He was supposed to be dining at his sister's.

"You're dining with us, then—on the roof. About 8. We're going on, later, to the Kendall party, so you'd better wear a white tie."

Lunch had lasted a long time, but, though they'd talked about all sorts of things, Peter couldn't have told you very much of what had been said, later, if you'd asked him.

Peter wasn't used to girls of Martha's sort at all, you see. She wasn't like the girls he'd known 10 years ago. She had a quick wit, a flashing conversational method; she said things that seemed to be superficially clever, and turned out, when you looked into them, to be deeper than they seemed. She was cynical, but he had an idea that her cynicism didn't go very deep; that it covered an emotional nature of which she was rather afraid, because she had found out, already, that when you felt things you were likely to get hurt.

That represented pretty involved character analysis for Peter, who hadn't had much occasion, as yet, to study people. His work, you see, had always been abstract and impersonal; it hadn't involved many human contacts. It didn't strike him that he was taking an altogether unusual interest, for him, in Martha; that he was quite unprecedentedly concerned with her mind and her reactions to life.

Peter knew a good deal, in a one-sided, theatrical fashion about psychology that dates back only to the announcement of the results of Freud's earlier studies. His knowledge wasn't what he himself would have called scientific, but it went well beyond that of the ordinary layman. On the other hand, it was oddly incomplete, because he'd never tried to apply it; never, somehow, thought of connecting Mr. A— and Mrs. B— and Miss C, or of the case histories, with the people he sat next to at dinner or saw, casually, across the aisle in a Pullman.

He knew that the most ordinary, the most commonplace looking people, did do things that it took all the wisdom and the skill of a Freud or a Jung or an Adler to rationalize and explain. But it didn't strike him that Martha, for example, or his own sister might conceal such potentialities.

Martha left him, abruptly, half a block from Romni, at 3 o'clock, and he dropped in at his sister's to make his excuses. Mrs. Wentworth, who had been Carol Wayne, was older than Peter by two or three years; the wife of a successful and prosperous lawyer, she was a mondaine of a sort commoner in New York than visiting Europeans are, as a rule, prepared to admit. She saw through Peter's transparently inadequate excuses at once, and was amused.

"Darling—of course it's all right!" she said. "I can get any one of a dozen men to fill in for you—and your bridge is abominable, so I can assure you you won't be missed! I'm rather glad, really. It's time you began to be interested in girls. There really are some rather nice ones around, you know."

"Don't be silly," said Peter. "It's nothing like that—"

"All right, then, it isn't," said Carol, unmoved. "You can tell me where you are dining, though, if you like."

He looked at her. Carol always made him feel like a small boy, but that is, of course, a way that sisters have, wholly regardless of the accidents of seniority of birth.

"With some people called Thayer, if you want to know. I knew the man in college."

"Tack Thayer?" said Carol, and frowned, just for a second. "He's a lot younger than you—I'd no idea you were at New Haven at the same time."

"Well, we were," said Peter.

"You ought to know," said Carol, appeasingly. "So they're still keeping up appearances, are they?"

"What do you mean by that?"

She opened her eyes wide. And laughed.

"I'm always forgetting you've been away!" she said. "Every one's expecting to hear that that marriage has crashed any day. Martha's mad about some boy—I forget his name. And Tack—well—what they say about him is nobody's business!"

"Meaning it's everybody's, I suppose," said Peter, nastily. "What a rotten town this is getting to be! I didn't know you'd turned gossip, though, Carol."

"I don't think I have, exactly," she said, not at all annoyed. "You're such a blue-eyed innocent, my lamb, that I like to let you know what's going on. And this town has changed. That's all. You never could see things that were right under your nose, and I don't suppose you ever will. Martha's a sweet child, but they've been in with a bad crowd, and —well—I'd just as soon you knew what you were getting into. Take it or leave it."

"Good Lord!" said Peter. "What do you mean, what I'm getting into? I'm dining with these kids, that's all. It hasn't occurred to me that I ought to come around and get you to tell me all the dirt there is about every house I dine at."

"Quite," said Carol. "Still—after all, you did lead me to think you were dining here tonight, and you're letting me know at tea time that you won't! Go your own gait, my dear. Only—if you want a bit of advice, go slow."

If she happened to look from the window she must have seen that he wasn't taking that advice literally, at any rate. For he fairly strode down the wide pavement, and anger and bewilderment were easy to read in his bearing. You may be a little sorry for Peter at this point, if you like; he was heading for trouble.

Peter broke off his musing to get up and stride up and down the roof. The policemen watched him, indifferently—but he knew what would happen if he tried to go downstairs. He glared at the lighted windows. What went on in there? He was furious at the thought of what they must be doing to Martha; more furious still at the futility of his own anger, at his utter lack of any power to be of service to her.

He thought of the mood in which he had left his sister's that night. She had achieved more of an effect than he had been at all willing to let her perceive, of course. He had known then, though very vaguely, that he was taking chances; rather, he had sensed it. He hadn't felt, he thought, so much that something had happened to him as that something was going to happen unless he was a good deal more careful than he was at all likely to be. And even that slightly uncomfortable feeling he had been inclined to attribute to the way Carol had talked.

Men, and especially brothers, are like that, of course. Peter always had hated the superior manner Carol sometimes assumed with him, her air of being infinitely wiser than he. And he really hadn't known what she was getting at about the Thayers, anyway.

He might have agreed that Tack and Martha weren't getting along any too well; he'd seen enough for himself to know that they weren't, for that matter. But that didn't mean they were on the rocks, as Carol assumed. They got on each other's nerves, probably, but that was true of a lot of couples. He'd been in New York long enough, by now, to think that the town itself, with its swift, hurried life, the queer, feverish rhythm of its pleasure making its refusal to allow enough time for sleep, accounted for that.

Those kids would snap out of it, all right. There must be some one who could make Tack realize what he was heading for if he didn't stop drinking so much. As for Martha and Evan Ross—Carol had meant Evan Ross, of course—Peter simply didn't believe there was anything in it. He didn't, and he wouldn't.

He could brush Carol's words of warning away as impatiently as he pleased, but they came back to plague him; she had a disconcerting way of being right altogether too often to make her an easy person to ignore. Something else bothered him, too.

He'd told Martha, when she called him up that morning, that she needn't explain anything to him, and he'd meant it. What she chose to do was her own business. Only she wished she hadn't started to tell him something, and then changed the subject. He could see now that that was what had happened at lunch. He wished she'd either told him nothing at all or a good deal more than she had.

Borough receipts from all sources for January, 1931, were $639,933.53; against $.94,665.43 for January, 1930, it was reported Thursday by R. A. McMurray, borough tax collector. This was a gain of $45,268 and was regarded as a good barometer of this year's business, it was said.

Bids on approximately $500,000 worth of municipal supplies were received and opened Thursday afternoon by the purchasing committee of council. Materials for use of the construction and fire departments formed the largest items. Actual purchases will be made at the next meeting of the committee, Thursday, February 26.

CONTROL OF CASH IN TENNESSEE HIT

NASHVILE, Tenn., Feb. 12.—(AP) Desks and files in the department of insurance and banking were described today as bulging with checks for hundreds of thousands of dollars while the empty Tennessee treasury faced an emergency.

On the tops and in drawers of desks and in correspondence files, J. H. O'Connell, an auditor, told the legislative investigating committee, he found between 600 and 700 checks that had not been entered upon the department's cash books.

The checks were for a total of $290,085.05, O'Connell said, and some were found in the desks of each of the ten clerks who, besides Commissioner A. S. Caldwell, handle cash items in the department.

O'Connell's examination was made February 2, as of January 31, and he said did not include some $300,000 of checks received on the day of the audit. The department collects fees for agents' licenses and taxes on insurance agencies and premiums.

The situation was about as unsatisfactory as it could be, said the witness, adding that "there appeared to be no control over cash at all."

Chairman Faulkner arose to say he was "astounded" at the conditions described and suggested an executive session of the committee. When this was over he instructed O'Connell to supplement his forces in the insurance department and make a "thorough audit for at least a year back."

It was estimated this would require a month.

O'Connell represents an auditing firm that the committee engaged to audit each department of the state government.

The law provides, O'Connell was told, that funds received one month are to be turned into the treasury not later than the tenth day of the next month. He said he had found checks aggregating $44.50 for October, $9.50 for November and $11,100.25 for December. The greatest number of checks, however, were received from January 26 to 31, the total for that period being $225,982.79. He reported that about $272,000 had been turned over by the department to the treasury early this month.

O'Connell inquired of Commissioner Caldwell, he testified, why cash was not deposited promptly to the department's own credit. He said he was informed that once cash is entered on the department's records it is not authorized by law to make any corrections for overpayments. Also, it was pointed to him, the department is at its peak at each semi-annual period.

That explanation seemed to the witness "very unsatisfactory." In all his experience, he told the committee, he "never saw such conditions for the control of cash."

The legislature delayed its midsession recess from January 30 to February 4 when it developed the treasury had no funds to finance the recess committees or meet pressing obligations. An emergency transfer of bridge funds was made for these purposes.

RITES FOR VICTIM OF TRUCK SUNDAY

Funeral services for Mrs. Sallie V. Ellis, 29, of 869 Bankhead avenue, who was killed Tuesday when struck by a truck as she ran to catch a street car in front of her home, will be at 11 o'clock Sunday morning at the Brown Memorial church. The Rev. W. S. Pruitt and the Rev. John Darnell will officiate and interment will be in Antioch cemetery.

Mrs. Esther Reddish, a companion of Mrs. Ellis, saw the truck too late to give warning. The driver, D. D. Venable, of 128 Hurt street, was arrested and later released under $1,000 bond.

Stage Show Inaugurates New Policy at Capitol Today

Theater To Be Host to 1,200 Guests at Premiere Tonight, Scheduled as Formal Affair.

The Capitol theater, which has reverted to the management of Universal, inaugurates a stage policy, the formal change taking place tonight with a gala premiere performance of the A. B. Marcus Company, presenting the "International Revue" on the stage, and the picturization of Tolstoy's "Resurrection" on the talking screen. The management of the theater will be hosts to more than 1,200 guests, the entire lower floor having been reserved for admittance by invitation only, which is to be a formal affair, beginning at 8:45 tonight.

Motion pictures are to be made of the crowds entering the theater and these will be projected on the screen later in the evening, while WGST will have a corps of announcers with a station hook-up by remote control to announce the entry of the guests. Barney, known of all the society element of Atlanta, hundreds of whom will be guests of the theater, will be stationed at the edge of the sidewalk as "carriage starter," lending a touch of the driving club to the affair.

The Capitol has been in the hands of the decorators yesterday and this will continue today. Flags and bunting will stream from the marquee and the building. The corridor leading to the door will also be a blaze of colored bunting and lights. A massive brand-new neon sign has been installed, and electricians have been working all night wiring the house for the myriads of special lights that will greet the guests.

Massive kleig lights will be stationed across the street from the theater for the aid of the motion picture cameramen and the entire block in which the theater is located will be ablaze with lights and bunting. Flares will burn from the marquee and bombs will be exploded from the top of the building at intervals from the early evening until the performance begins.

The management of the Capitol promises a real Hollywood and New York premiere, and from the activity at and around the theater all this week their promise will probably be fulfilled.

The opening stage presentation will be A. B. Marcus' Company in the "International Revue," which is coming to Atlanta today directly from a long run in Philadelphia. The company consists of 18 principals and 24 young ladies of the ensemble, and is said to be one of the most lavishly dressed and pleasing stage shows now on tour. The company will be met by city officials and the theater heads at the Terminal station at noon today, and a parade will be staged from the station to the theater.

On the screen will be shown Universal's picturization of Tolstoy's "Resurrection," with Lupe Velez as Katusha and John Boles as Dmitri. It is said the roles fit these popular players excellently.

The fact that more than 100 people are being put to work by the change of policy of the Capitol will have a splendid effect on the unemployment situation in the city, the management calling attention to the fact that a complete union orchestra, a full corps of stage employes, in addition to the regular corps of projectionists, will be put to work beginning today, and this in addition to the big stage personnel, who will patronize the hotels, restaurants and stores of the city. It is estimated that more than $3,000 a week will be put in circulation by the new policy at the Capitol.

TARZAN, LORD OF THE JUNGLE No. 5

By Edgar Rice Burroughs

© 1931, by Edgar Rice Burroughs, Inc. All rights reserved.

"Once we are come to Nimmr," continued Ibn Jad, "there will be no difficulty in finding the treasure. The trouble will lie in getting out of El-Habash with it and the woman. If she is as beautiful as the Sahar said, the men of Nimmr may protect her even more savagely than they would the treasure. But we shall find a way."

"Often do magicians lie," replied Tollog, sagely. Just then came the sound of men approaching through the jungle. "It is Fahd and Motlog coming back from the hunt," said the Sheik. With astonishment, they then saw Tarzan, surrounded by his guards, making his way toward the beyt. For a moment the ape-man intently scrutinized Ibn Jad and the shifty-eyed visage of Tollog.

Tarzan was the first to speak. "Who is Sheik here?" he demanded in tones of authority. "Behold him," replied Ibn Jad, "and by what name are you known?" "They call me Tarzan of the Apes, Moslem," said Tarzan calmly. "I have heard the name," sneered the Sheik. "All Arab slave raiders have," Tarzan said. "Why then, have you come to my country?"

"We come but to trade in peace for ivory," Ibn Jad began suavely. "Thou liest in thy beard," returned Tarzan quietly. "I have seen Galla slaves in thy menzil. They are not here of their own choosing. Remove the thongs that bind me and prepare to return north from whence thou came." At that, Ibn Jad's eyes narrowed and he came close to the wrist-bound ape-man.

Peace Keynote Marks Papal Radio Address

BY ANDRUE BERDING.

VATICAN CITY, Feb. 12.—(AP)—Radio, invention of the twentieth century, carried the age-old Latin of Pope Pius XI to the four corners of the world today, as millions of listeners heard the first papal broadcast in history.

The pope, himself the most modern of all pontiffs in thought and action, blessed the new invention and bestowed, in a message marked by a fervent keynote of peace and co-operation, the apostolic benediction upon the world.

Twice during the day his holiness spoke to the microphone. His first adress, in Latin, dedicated the new Vatican radio station, presented him by Senator Guglielmo Marconi, "father" of wireless telephony.

In it he spoke to all classes, to the members of his hierarchy and to his followers, to dissidents, to workers and employers, to the rich and the poor, the persecuted and afflicted.

To millions of Catholics he became, through the medium of the ether waves, for the first time a living personage in a personal way. They heard his clear, earnest voice in their own room and offices, a voice to hear which uncounted pilgrims in the last nine years have journeyed uncounted miles.

To all he suggested the example of Christ and asked them to help one another and to enrich their lives with Christian peace and charity.

Later the pontiff presided at the ceremony at the pontifical academy of sciences and welcomed Senator Marconi personally as a member. Then he conferred upon him the papal grand cross, one of the highest honors in his power to bestow.

Senator Marconi and Father Gianfranceschi, director of the new radio station and a scientist of note who accompanied General Umberto Nobile on his first expedition to the arctic, spoke briefly. Then Monsignor Francis J. Spellman, of Boston, Mass., delivered the English translation.

The pope's second speech was in Italian and Monsignor Spellman's translation was made under high pressure since his holiness did not have the written speech ready until late in the morning.

On his first appearance before the microphone Pope Pius was wreathed in smiles and apparently in the best of health. He walked about the station and inspected everything with boyish eagerness. He was not content with formal explanations and repeatedly asked Senator Marconi for additional information.

The pontiff took his seat on a gilded red damask throne before the microphone with the nonchalance of a veteran announcer. Once in a while, however, he forgot himself far enough to make a little gesture of raising his right hand and letting it down sharply on his knee to accentuate his points.

He did not hesitate when Senator Marconi moved the microphone into position but immediately plunged into his discourse.

He spoke his Latin rather more rapidly than he usually speaks Italian, French or German to visiting pilgrimages. Once or twice he glanced questioningly at Marconi as if he were a little surprised to find himself speaking into an unresponsive instrument a message which ordinarily he would deliver to a group of hundreds or thousands of applauding pilgrims.

When he had finished he turned to Senator Marconi and Father Gianfranceschi and spoke a few words of compliment when they assured him that the instruments had functioned perfectly and that his speech was now ringing in the ears of millions of people.

Five cardinals, including the papal secretary of state, Pacelli, and Cardinal Gasparri, who were negotiators of the Lateran treaty as the result of which the station was erected, greeted him upon his arrival and stood near-by while he spoke. There was a singular lack of the usual stiff formality of the pope's appearances.

Text of Pope's Latin Address

VATICAN CITY, Feb. 12.—(AP)—The text of the pope's speech at the inauguration of the Vatican City radio station follows, (the translation is from Latin to English):

"To all creation:

"We, being through the high design of God, successors of the Prince of the Apostles of Him that in whose doctrine and preaching is destined through Divine command for all peoples and for every creature, and being able for the first time to avail ourselves of Marconi's admirable invention here, we speak first to all things and to all men, speaking to them here and as follows with the words themselves of Holy Scripture:

"'Hear ye, oh heavens, that which I shall say, and listen, oh, earth, to the words of my mouth.

"'Listen, all people, lend your ear all you who inhabit the globe, united toward the same end, both the rich and the poor. Hear, oh islands, and listen on distant peoples.'

"To God—and let this be our first word, glory to God on high and peace on earth to men of good will.

Glory to God.

"Glory to God who gives in our days such power to men of making their words arrive even to the confines of the earth; and peace on earth where we are representatives of that divine Jesus, the Redeemer whose coming announced peace, peace to the far and peace to the near, pacifying in the blood of the cross both the things that are on earth as well as those in the skies.

"To Catholics—In speaking, then, to men, the Apostle commands us to do good to all but especially to the servants of the faith. We must therefore address our first words to them, to all those who, making part of the family and fold of the Lord which is the Catholic church. Call us with the sweet name of father; to fathers and to sons we speak, to the sheep and to the lambs, to all those whom the Shepherd and Supreme King, Jesus Christ, has confided to us in order to nourish them and guide them.

"To the Hierarchy—You, we say, our brethren cardinals of the holy Roman church, patriarchs, archbishops, bishops, prelates and priests, distributed in the different grades of the hierarchy, the principal object of our daily talks and at the same time the auxiliaries and partakers of our labors; we pray and beg that each of you remain faithful to your vocation in which he was called, and that each one of you walk worthily of the vocation to which you have been called.

Nourish the Flock.

"Nourish the flock of God which is amongst you, forming with all your heart your flock so that when the Prince of Shepherds appears you will receive the incorruptible crown of glory.

"Meanwhile the God of Peace who had resurrected from death the great pastor of the sheep in the blood of the eternal Testament, our Lord Jesus Christ, guides you toward every good so that you may fulfill His will, accomplishing in yourselves that which will be pleasing in His sight by means of Jesus Christ.

"To the Religious—And now we speak to you, oh sons and daughters of our predelection who, emulating the best examples and seconding not only the precepts but also the desires and counsels of the Divine King and His spouse, in fidelity to your most holy vows and in the religious discipline of all your life, perfume with virgin fragrance the church of God, illuminate it with your contemplations, uphold it with prayers, enrich it with science and doctrine, cultivate and enlarge ever so much more with your ministry of the word and with the works of the apostolate.

"Partakers therefore in one vocation truly heavenly and angelic, so much more precious is the treasure that you bring as the greater degree of diligence you use in conserving it, not only to render certain your vocation and election but also because the heart of the king and of your spouse might find in you, as in servants completely faithful and devoted, some consolation and reparation for the infinite offenses and negligences with which men return His ineffable love.

To Missionaries.

"To Missionaries—Now our words turn toward you, oh sons and daughters very dear in Christ, who in the missions pray and work to propagate the holy faith of Jesus Christ and to extend His kingdom; like the first apostles of the church you also, in perils, necessities and tribulations, create with great patience an example for all.

"Like them you also are the 'glory of God;' you who in labors, often in chains and in blood, fighting even unto death the good and great battle of faith and of suffering, and confessing generously your faith, gain your souls and sow the seed of future Christians.

"We salute you, oh strong soldiers of Christ. But together with you we salute the native priests and good catechists, principal fruits and now colleagues and helpers of your labors.

"To all faithful—our heart turns toward you, to all who are faithful citizens of our episcopal city and of all the world; toward you especially who, like the first believers, the men and women of whom the apostle makes high praise, even though belonging to the laity, in the apostolate collaborate with us and with our venerable brothers, the bishops, and with the priests, to you, Oh people of God and sheep of his pasture, you elect of the race, regal priesthood, holy nation, people gained by God.

Let Modesty Be Known.

"Let your modesty, so well known to all men, and all that which is true, all that which is pure, all that which is just, all that which is saintly, all that which is loveable and of good fame, every virtue and every laudable discipline, form the object of your thoughts and be your works so that God may be glorified in everything and in everyone.

"To infidels and dissidents—also to you our thoughts and our words turn as many of you are far from faith and from the unity of Christ. For you every day we offer prayers to God and the Lord of all, earnestly asking that he with his light illuminate you and guide you and unite you to the sheep which hear his voice, and that there be only one fold and one shepherd.

"To governors—and since we are debtors to all, we speak first to those who govern that they command in justice and in charity, toward utility and edification, and not toward ruin, always remembering that there is no power if not from God, and that to God they must render rigorous count.

"To subjects—to subjects, then we say, that they should obey their superiors, not as toward men, but as toward God, knowing that he who resists legitimate authority resists the dispositions of God, and that he who in this way resist prepares damnation for himself.

Rich as Ministers.

"To the rich—we speak to rich and to poor in this way: To the rich we say that they must consider themselves as ministers of divine providence and depositaries and dispensers of their goods, to whom Jesus Christ himself recommended the poor, and from whom the Divine Judge, then, will demand more because they have received more; and they must remember always the Divine Word, 'Woe unto you, oh rich!'

"To the poor—we exhort, then, in the Lord, the poor who recall to us the poverty of Jesus Christ our Lord and Savior. Remembering His examples and His promises they should not abandon the gathering of spiritual riches, rendered so much more easily to them, and though attempting in so far as is legal to better their state, with good and upright heart let them make themselves agreeable to the Lord, and let them never extend their hands toward iniquity.

"To workmen and employers—we earnestly beg of workmen and of employers that, avoiding every hostile contest and mutual strife, joined in fraternal and friendly alliance, they exchange on the one hand the means and direction and on the other hand the work and ability, and, not asking except what is just, and not denying what is just, let them strive in tranquility and order, not so much for the benefit of the one but for the good of all.

"To the afflicted and persecuted—last in execution, but first in our attention and in our affections, our word goes out to you, to all of you who are in infirmity and in sorrow, in tribulation and adversity, especially to you who suffer such terrible things from the enemies of God and of human society.

"While we offer for you our prayers and as much as we can, also our assistance, while we recommend you to the charity of all we speak to you on the part of Christ whom we represent: 'Come to Me all you who are weary and afflicted and I will restore you.'

"There remains only the imparting, with all our hearts, of the apostolic benediction to the city and to the world, and to all those who live in it, which we do in the name of the Father, the Son and the Holy Ghost."

Text of Pope's Italian Address

ROME, Feb. 12.—(AP)—The text of the pope's address at the Pontifical Academy of Science, translated from Italian into English, follows.

"We say most willingly that our acceptance of the radio station is most dear to us, but still more dear is the gift and the sentiment of Senator Marconi.

"We offer thanks to God and thanks to man for this great new invention. Thanks to God for his manifestations, so genuine and so accurate of His divine goodness. We give thanks to God for this great invention which brings us so close to him.

"A few days ago we inaugurated the power station, perhaps one of the most modern of its kind in Italy and one of the most perfect in existence.

"Today we have attained the apex of modern invention in the new radio apparatus—the last word in technicality and science.

"Senator Marconi had promised us one of the most modern of inventions. This promise he has fulfilled so magnificently that we may ask what yet remains to constitute the latest development in radio.

"No one will think that we are far from the primate of Peter in adopting this new invention. Let it be known that we have adopted it in the true sense of Peter propagating the church.

"It is a privilege to accept this great invention which we shall use as an instrument to spread the faith and the church.

"The radio is the offspring of ultra modern science. It serves the glory of God and the efficacy of spreading salvation into all souls.

"In this great privilege we shall rejoice continually. The realization of this dream is a recompense for the work that was needed to build this station.

"We have heard expressed the sentiments of Senator Marconi and of Father Gianfranceschi

RAIN AND SNOW FALL IN CENTRAL STATES

Drouth-Ridden States Welcome Rain and Snow.

KANSAS CITY, Feb. 12.—(AP)—Snow and rain made another sally into the drouth-ridden central states tonight from the Rocky mountain region.

Unsettled weather was general over the grain belt and extended into Dixie after a storm that brought long-awaited precipitation to parts of Montana, Wyoming and Colorado.

The moisture came on the heels of rain and snow less than a week ago which helped the drouth situation materially after a warm dry spell of two months.

The government forecast called for snow tonight or tomorrow in Kansas, Nebraska and parts of Iowa and Missouri, and rains in Oklahoma, Arkansas, Texas, Louisiana, Tennessee and Kentucky.

Snow was reported today in South Dakota and parts of Wyoming and Nebraska. Light rains fell in Missouri, Iowa, Kansas and Texas.

Temperatures in the midwest were above seasonal levels but colder weather was due overnight.

An area of low pressure centered today in the vicinity of Des Moines, Iowa, was responsible for the unsettled weather.

BLAINE'S CHARGES DENIED BY BROWN

Postal Head Says Senator Trying To Deceive American Public.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 12.—(AP)—Chairman Blaine, of the senate postal lease investigating committee, was charged tonight by Postmaster-General Brown with using "the cloak of his senatorial immunity" in a "deliberate" attempt to deceive the American public into believing there has been widespread fraud in postoffice leases.

"The senator has not a scintilla of evidence to support such a charge," Brown said in a formal statement.

The postmaster-general denied that beneficiaries of the postal leases have contributed a million and a quarter dollars to the Coolidge and Hoover campaign funds, asserting that although they number many thousands they have contributed "the insignificant sum of $500" to republican campaign funds since 1924.

Brown's bristling statement was issued just 24 hours after his appearance before the Blaine committee when his refusal to furnish records of the postoffice department resulted in several sharp verbal clashes with the committee chairman.

Referring to this incident, he said: "Senator Blaine now charges the present administration of the postoffice department with failure to cooperate with his committee.

"The fact is that the department has afforded Senator Blaine's agents and investigators every facility for doing their work.

"It has made available to them the complete files concerning all existing lease contracts. It will continue to make such records available.

"The department does not intend, however, to make any disclosures of information which is related only to its future policies, and which, if made public prematurely would embarrass and handicap the transaction of public business."

Characterizing the government's past policy of renting postoffice quarters as "wasteful and extravagant in the extreme," Brown said every postmaster-general for the last 15 years had urged congress to provide for acquisition and ownership of such buildings.
